PARLIAMENT IN JAPAN QUILTS ON RULER'S ORDER

Imperial Decree Orders Dissolution to Clear Way for Elections

POLICIES MAPPED OUT

Ministers Insist Japan Has Territorial Ambitions in Manchuria

Tokio—(AP)—The Japanese parliament was dissolved by imperial decree this afternoon, to make way for general elections.

The order was promulgated immediately after Premier Inukai, Foreign Minister Yoshizawa and Finance Minister Takahashi completed an outline of the new government's program to both houses and no opportunity was given the opposition members to ask questions.

In the outline of policies, the three ministers touched upon the Manchurian question, reiterating that Japan has no territorial ambitions in the territory. They also criticized the late Wakatsuki cabinet for removing the gold embargo and said industry has witnessed a revival since the embargo was replaced by themselves.

The premier declared Japan's aim in Manchuria is solely the observance by China of existing treaties. The open door principle, he said, is the "root and trunk" of Japanese national policy and it must be based on "non-territorial ambitions and Japan's stand for the respect of existing treaties, thus safeguarding peace in the far east."

"In recent years," Foreign Minister Yoshizawa said, "the Chinese authorities, ignoring the historical fact that the present development of Manchuria is entirely due to Japanese efforts and taking advantage of our complaisance, have pursued a policy of oppression toward the Japanese and repeatedly have set at naught their treaty rights. The protests and warnings of the Japanese government were of little avail."

Position Menaced

"Thus the situation became more and more disquieting politically and the menace to our position increasingly grave. The Japanese patience was tried to the breaking point when the bombing incident of Sept. 18, came suddenly. (The reference was to the bombing of the Japanese-owned South Manchuria railway.)

"Manchuria holds the key to peace in the far east. This was true before the Russo-Japanese war; it is even more true at present. In the past Japan always has done everything in its power to prevent civil commotion in China from spreading to Manchuria because we possess there important rights and interests rendering the maintenance of peace a matter of absolute necessity to Japan."

"Thanks to these untiring efforts, Manchuria has been kept free from the constant turmoil of China proper and has been converted into a land of peace and security."

What Japan desires, he said, is only "to secure peace and order in Manchuria and to make that region safe, both for Chinese and foreigners, and to open it all for economic development."

Both the United States and the league of nations, he said, have now a much better understanding of Japan's case, thanks to the government's "clarifying reiteration" that Tokyo has no territorial aims in the province and is standing for the policy of the open door.

Speaker Keijiro Nakamura of the lower house read the imperial decree dissolving the diet immediately after Premier Inukai, Foreign Minister Yoshizawa and Finance Minister Takahashi had addressed the house, giving the same speeches they had made earlier in the house of peers.

Order Autopsy In Death Of Riske Witness

BEHIND THE GERMAN SMOKE SCREEN

BY HUBERT R. KNICKERBOCKER
(Copyright, 1932, by New York Evening Post, Inc.)

(EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the eleventh of a series of articles by H. R. Knickerbocker, New York Evening Post correspondent, on conditions in Germany and the outlook for future reparations payments.)

Brunswick—One National Socialist is today in power in a German state. Tomorrow there may be many, but today Herr Dietrich Klagges, Minister of the Interior and of Education in the state of Brunswick, is the only National Socialist in a position of governing authority, and today Herr Klagges, in his first interview with a foreign correspondent, gave unique assistance toward an answer to some of the questions that the outside world most frequently asks about Germany.

Cabinet In Mexico Is Reorganized

Mexico City—(AP)—The Mexican capital awoke today after a week of insistent rumors to find a reorganized cabinet in power—a cabinet containing four new members and four carryovers from the old administration.

The four members who dropped out were Finance Minister Montes de Oca, Foreign Minister Genaro Estrada, Minister of Communications Gustavo P. Serrano, and Minister of Industry Aaron Saenz.

Senor Estrada was appointed ambassador to Spain and Mexican representative at the league of nations. The replacements were: Alberto J. Pani, former ambassador to Spain, who becomes finance minister; General Abelardo Rodriguez, who moves up from undersecretaryship to become minister of industry; General Miguel M. Acosta, who becomes minister of communications, and General Juan Jose Rios who replaces Manuel C. Teles as minister of interior. Senor Teles, former ambassador to Washington, was transferred from the interior ministry to the post of foreign minister.

It was the second cabinet turnover in four months. The reason for the change was not announced by President Pascual Ortiz Rubio, although it was generally understood to be due to some discontent that developed from passage of the recent clergy restriction law, and to a dispute over anti-recession laws.

Many observers said the shake-up had its inception in December during an intense discussion that followed observance of Guadalupe day and led to a religious law restricting cults to one priest for each fifty thousand inhabitants in the federal district.

HOOVER ACTS TO HALT REDUCTION OF WAGES

Washington—(AP)—President Hoover moved today to keep contractors on government buildings from paying lower wages than other employers in the same community.

By an executive order, it was decreed that stipulations of the Bacon-Davis prevailing wage scale law shall be written into all public buildings contracts, along with a clause permitting cancellation of the contracts if the prevailing wage is not paid.

Existing contracts do not include the cancellation stipulation or the prohibition of rebates as will the new agreements.

WANT RUTH MCCORMICK AS PRESIDENT OF U. S.

Minneapolis—(AP)—Members of a University of Minnesota forensic society believe Ruth Hanna McCormick should be United States president.

Miss Lillian Gilliland, president of Kappa Kappa, today said a campus club was being organized to work in behalf of the former Illinois congresswoman.

She said Mrs. McCormick was endorsed because of "her sound economic theories and belief that prohibition should not be a chief election issue."

ROBBERS IN NEW YORK GET $250,000 IN GEMS

New York—(AP)—Jewelry valued by police at more than $250,000 was stolen today from the apartment of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Glenby in E. 67-st by three bandits who bound Glenby and a butler and escaped about the time detectives, informed by telephone, were starting for the scene from police station, a little more than two blocks away.

Police believed the robbery was planned when attention was drawn to Mrs. Glenby's jewelry by reports of her loss of a $50,000 ear ring at a New Year's party.

EDWARD HIDDE DIES SUDDENLY AT RESIDENCE

Threatening Notes Caused Family to Leave New London, Wife Says

An autopsy and an inquest was to be ordered today by District Attorney L. D. Smith of Waupaca in the death of Edward Hidde, 42, at Manawa last Monday afternoon. Hidde, one of the state's principal witnesses in the recent trial of Edward Riske, 48, New London, charged with murdering Louis Hoffman, 32, and Henry Kopitzke, 46, New London, at a barn dance in Waupaca last June, died under what the district attorney termed "sudden and mysterious circumstances."

Hidde, who with his wife and family recently moved from New London to Manawa following the receipt of letters threatening the lives of himself and his wife, was taken ill early Monday morning while working for W. W. Bigford at Manawa. Returning home, he died at 4 o'clock that afternoon.

At first it was believed that death was the result of heart disease, but later suspicious circumstances developed and relatives yesterday notified county authorities and an investigation was started immediately. District Attorney Smith said this noon that he was planning to call the autopsy and the inquest because physicians were unable to give any reasonable explanation for Hidde's death and that it was a significant fact that Hidde was one of the state's star witnesses in the recent murder trial.

The district attorney said he knew nothing about threatening notes received by Mr. and Mrs. Hidde.

Free On Bonds

Riske was convicted by a jury in circuit court at Waupaca early in November of the murder of Hoffman, but Judge Byron B. Park set the verdict aside and ordered a new trial. The case has been placed on the May calendar which opens May 2. Riske is free on bonds of $5,000.

The arrest of Riske followed the deaths of Hoffman and Kopitzke, who were taken violently ill and died within a few minutes while they were at a barn dance. Riske and several others were on the party and Riske's arrest was ordered on suspicion. Early on the morning of July 7, the day before the inquest into the death of her husband and Kopitzke, Mrs. Hoffman committed suicide by drowning in the Wolf river at New London.

It was the contention of the state at the murder trial that Riske put strychnine in a bottle of moonshine liquor from which Kopitzke and Hoffman drank and that they died as a result. It was charged that Riske was in love with Mrs. Hoffman and that he sought to remove her husband because of this fact.

The defense, however, claimed that Mrs. Hoffman was responsible for the murder of the two men. They charged that Mrs. Hoffman once made a statement to the effect that she would kill her husband before she would give him a divorce.

At the time of the murder Riske was staying at the home of Charles Speck at New London, father of Mrs. Hidde. The Hiddes also were living at the Speck home at this time.

Told About Note

Mrs. Hidde testified to receiving a note for Riske from Mrs. Hoffman.

May Visit Duce

Paris—(AP)—A report circulated in parliamentary circles today said Premier Pierre Laval intends to pay a visit to Premier Mussolini of Italy in February or March. The problem of fixing the relative strength of the French and Italian navies, which was the subject of several conferences last year, is still unsettled.

Tells About Kidnaping Of Labor Leader

Chicago—(AP)—The kidnaping a month ago of a former president of the Illinois Federation of Labor and his subsequent release for $50,000 ransom raised by a local milk wagon drivers' union after he had been starved and tortured two days was revealed yesterday.

The victim was Robert G. Fitchie, 68, president of the Milk Drivers' Union Local No. 752.

The abduction was substantiated only yesterday by his wife, Mrs. Ida Fitchie, who also supplied the details of the captivity of her husband and described him as a broken man. No report of the affair, however, has been given to public officials—in keeping with the abductors' warnings.

Mrs. Fitchie said her husband now is in Florida, whither he fled in fear a few days after he had returned to his home, seriously ill. She refused to divulge the place he went to recuperate.

Despite the lack of official report of the kidnaping, police were expected to investigate whether Fitchie's kidnaping and torture had been engineered by the band of alleged kidnapers, torturers, and extortionists who were seized a fortnight ago. Six members of the band, Turn to page 4 col. 2

RHINELANDER ELKS' BUILDING IS BURNED

Rhineland—(AP)—A fire which raged for five hours this morning caused a loss which firemen estimated will exceed the total fire loss for this city in either 1930 or 1931.

The Elks club rooms were destroyed, their bowling alleys partly destroyed and heavy damage was suffered by the Crawford-Willeke Flower and Music shop, the Wisconsin Valley Power company and the Noble Sheet Metal works. All the concerns were in one building, which was owned by the Elks club.

PLAN PROGRAM TO CELEBRATE CITY'S BIRTH

Mayor Authorized to Appoint Official Anniversary Committee

The first step in an all-city celebration in honor of the bi-centennial of the birth of George Washington, and the seventy-fifth anniversary of the organization of the city of Appleton was taken by the common council Wednesday evening when it adopted a resolution authorizing the mayor to appoint a committee of citizens to arrange for the observance of these anniversaries.

The committee, of which the mayor is to be honorary chairman, may be appointed within the next few days. No date has been set for the celebration, which will be one of the most momentous in the history of the city, but it probably will be sometime during the latter part of April, as the actual birthday of the organization of the city falls on the third Tuesday of April. If weather conditions prohibit a proper observance during April, the event may be held over until the first week in May.

The following is the resolution presented unanimously by the council:

"Whereas, the year 1932 is the bi-centennial of the birth of George Washington, the first president of the United States, and also the seventy-fifth anniversary of the organization of Appleton as a city, and

"Whereas both the events commemorated this year have had tremendous influence upon the people of our community, and

"Whereas, it is proper that the people of Appleton give fitting recognition to these anniversaries, be it

"Resolved that the common council of the city of Appleton hereby authorizes and requests the mayor to appoint a committee of citizens, of which he is to be the honorary chairman and to be known as the Official Anniversary committee, to arrange for such observance of these anniversaries as will honor the memory of George Washington and will recall to mind the stirring events in the history of our city."

MELLON AND HYDE DISAGREE ON LOANS

Senator Glass Aims Differences on Legality of Loans Made to Europe

Washington—(AP)—Two cabinet members—Secretaries Mellon and Hyde—were represented in the senate today as being in disagreement over the legality of European loans made by the Wilson administration after the war.

Senator Glass (D., Va.) who was secretary of the treasury under Woodrow Wilson, charged that statements by the secretary of agriculture that the loans were "with-out legal right" were "false in spirit and in fact."

To support his contention he produced a letter from Secretary Mellon saying neither the treasury nor the war department had taken the position that the loans were made without authority by law.

The secretary's letter, replying to one from Glass asking for a statement on the matter, said congress had authorized loans to be made until the actual termination of the war. Secretary Mellon pointed out that the official end of the war was July 2, 1921, as fixed by President Harding, and not the date of the armistice, Nov. 11, 1918.

Glass said the loans after the armistice were to insure against resumption of hostilities among other things.

"Many of the loans," he added, "were made upon the insistence of the present occupant of the White House who at that time was in charge of matters relating to rehabilitation of our allies."

SENATE BATTLE IS SEEN IN NOMINATION

Washington—(AP)—President Hoover today nominated Thad Frown of Ohio, to be a member of the Radio commission in defiance of the opposition of Chairman Coughens of the senate interstate commerce committee. A contest was promptly predicted.

As the nomination reached the senate, Senator Coughens gave notice of his intention to fight confirmation. He previously had informed the president of his opposition.

The senator did not name his grounds, but it is understood he regards the Brown appointment as a political one. It seems certain that the Ohio Republican leader will be opposed by a political line up in the senate.

BULLETINS

Chicago—(AP)—Thirteen defendants in the middle west liquor conspiracy trial changed their pleas to guilty today as the government wound up its case. Mike Blumberg of Clinton, Iowa, a leading defendant, and nine others amended their pleas at noon and three more admitted guilt as the defense began introducing witnesses this afternoon.

Washington—(AP)—The senate today adopted the conference report on the $125,000,000 federal land bank bill, completing congressional action.

Alienist Is Assailed By Winnie Judd

Phoenix, Ariz.—(AP)—Winnie Ruth Judd leaped from her chair during her murder trial today to denounce Dr. Joseph Catton of San Francisco, prosecution alienist.

"You get out of here," she cried, rising with tensed muscles and flashing eyes as the tall psychiatrist approached her chair during a brief court recess.

"Make him get out, make him get out," she appealed to her attorneys. "I won't have you near me," she cried, swinging again to confront Dr. Catton. "You talked about me. Get out."

Dr. Catton backed away, then turned and left the room as defense counsel, the nation, and Dr. George W. Stephens, defense alienist, attempted to quiet Mrs. Judd.

The defendant finally was persuaded to return to her chair, muttering, "I won't have him near me. He's talked about me. He's acted like a little boy."

She sat nervously clapping and unclapping her hands, glaring angrily at the doorway through which Catton had disappeared.

Mrs. Judd is facing trial for the slaying of Agnes Anne Leitold and Hedvig Samuelson, her friends, here last October and sending their bodies to Los Angeles in trunks. Her last day of testimony started today following two days spent in seclusion of a jury.

J. J. Halloran, wealthy Phoenix businessman, whose name was brought into the case early as that of a friend of Mrs. Judd and her two victims, was among the crowd of witnesses brought into the court room to be sworn.

Halloran's name was given the court clerk, but County Attorney Lloyd J. Andrews did not include him when he called the roll of his witnesses.

Defense counsel did not call the roll of his witnesses.

GREEN BAY SUICIDE BELIEVED IDENTIFIED

Green Bay—(AP)—I. E. White, a widower and a native of Kansas, was the man known as "Kenwood Williams" who committed suicide in the Motor Inn here Monday night after shooting Mrs. Mabel Rand three times. It was learned today in a long distance conversation this morning between John Mohr, proprietor of Motor Hotel, and John Hudson of Watonga, Okla., believed to be a brother-in-law.

The deceased's name and personal history was given with reluctance, and only when Hudson was informed that the information was necessary for the death certificate. Whether another lives in Watonga, it was reported.

Dr. Gary and five other students at the University of Michigan founded the fraternity in 1887. He was its first secretary.

Dr. Gary was born in Oshkosh, Wis., and practiced dentistry in Neenah and Appleton, 33 years. He retired in 1927 and came here to live with his sister, Mrs. Julia G. Royl.

Funeral services will be held Saturday.

HOUSE STAND ON MEASURE STILL TO BE DECIDED

Bill Has Fair Chance of Final Passage During Current Week

PROVIDES FOR SURTAXES

Proposal Approved by Progressive Advisors of Governor LaFollette

Madison—(AP)—An unemployment relief bill for $7,000,000 which stands a fair chance of final enactment within a few days was introduced in the senate this morning and soon will be passed by that house.

It represents a common ground on which the conservative and the Progressive Republicans, in the senate, at least, were able to get together, in the belief that the long drawn out special session should end with the assurance that a relief bill will become law.

The only unanswered question was what the assembly will do with it, but the feeling prevailed that it stands an even chance of being approved by Progressives in that house in view of the fact that close advisors to Governor LaFollette in the senate are backing it. There may have to be some compromise on amendments.

The bill represents no party backing for it was introduced by joint finance committee on which both conservatives and Progressives are represented.

A favorable vote in the senate was blocked temporarily this morning by Senator Philip Nelson of Maple, an independent, and Senator Walter Polakowski, Milwaukee Socialist, who said they could not vote for it in its present form. Consideration was laid over to the afternoon session.

Tax Provisions

The bill raises the $7,000,000 in appropriation for income surtaxes and a two-year chain stores. It specifically provides that none of the cost shall be placed on general property. The surtax rates are 50 per cent of the normal tax rate on individuals and 150 per cent of the normal rate on corporations. Dividends are not taxed. That is a concession by the Progressives.

Reduction from the taxable income of lessors suffered through defaulted investment values will not be allowed. That is a concession by the conservatives.

The measure releases at once to the counties, towns, cities and villages of 25 per cent of the amount they spent in 1931 for outdoor poor relief. Figuring state expenditures for that purpose last year at an aggregate of $5,000,000 the localities thus would get about $2,500,000 immediately.

An additional $250,000 is appropriated for the industrial commission to administer to those localities not fairly reimbursed in the $2,000,000 settlement.

Five per cent of the total proceeds, or about $350,000 goes for forestry work.

The remainder goes to localities in proportion to their 1931 relief expenditures. To prevent money being appropriated and not being replaced which removes the possibility of any of the cost being placed on general property, this provision is included: The state emergency board is empowered to keep the disbursements, after the specific appropriations, within the receipts.

Favored by Duncan

Senator Thomas M. Duncan, executive secretary to Governor LaFollette, who tried to push the bill through the senate this morning, estimated that the total proceeds during 1932 would be $5,000,000 and that about $1,500,000 would be forthcoming from chain stores in 1933.

Positive estimates of the tax yield are not possible but Senator George Blanchard, conservative floor leader said he was convinced the bill would produce $2,000,000 or more.

Senator Nelson opposed it because it makes appropriations to the localities on the basis of what they spent last year. He said that some towns, cities, and villages had little in tax receipts, spent practically nothing for relief in 1931 and would receive nothing under the bill.

A similar attitude is expected to be taken by some members of the assembly with the likelihood that an amendment will be introduced to insure the counties 50 cents per inhabitant. What effect this would have on the other financial provisions has not been explained.

Senator Polakowski announced he would vote against the measure because he considered it entirely inadequate.

Job Provisions

In addition to appropriations the bill has two other important provisions for relief of the jobless.

One directs the highway commission to plan as much as possible of the bridge work in the normal five year program so that projects can

New "Hex Murder" In Pennsylvania Baffles Authorities

CHURCH WORKER FOUND STABBED THROUGH HEART

Symbols Carved on Forehead Cause Suspicion to Point at Witch Cults

Philadelphia —(P)— The hand of a Pennsylvania "hex doctor" was seen by authorities today in the mysterious slaying of Norman B. Bechtel, Mennonite church worker. Weird symbols were found carved on Bechtel's forehead.

The man was a native of Boyertown, Pa., and spent his youth in a region where "the hexes" and other witchcraft cults have held sway. Examination of Bechtel's body brought to light the curious markings on his forehead.

Small crescents had been cut on each side of his forehead and a horizontal cut about one inch long was under each crescent. Another cut ran straight down to the bridge of the nose and two others ran diagonally upward from each eyebrow. He had been killed, police said, by one powerful thrust of a stilet-pointed dagger that ripped through his overcoat, through his spectacles case and into his heart.

The weapon was plunged seven more times in a small circle around the heart.

The victim was found a few hours after he had driven Miss Eleanor Temple and Robert Ross to their homes from a church meeting.

John Cole, a young Negro garage attendant, was arrested and questioned.

Hunt For Motive

For hours after the victim was found, police were baffled in their search for a motive for the slaying. It was at first believed the man had been so brutally clubbed as to make his features unrecognizable.

Robbery was considered as a possible reason for the crime, but police were not satisfied this was the solution. Bechtel was also thought by some investigators to have been the victim of mistaken identity. He was found by a policeman guarding the home of Judge Harry S. McDewitt of the common pleas court, who was threatened recently.

Cole, police learned, had looked after Bechtel's automobile and had been seen at the latter's apartment. Search for fingerprints on the victim's automobile proved of little value, police said, as did an examination of his apartment.

"I found nothing there to give us a clue to these 'hex' marks," Captain Harry Healy of the murder squad, said. "Everything we found indicated he was an upright and honest young church worker. There was nothing to show that he belonged to any secret order."

TELEPHONE RECORDS IN CONSPIRACY TRIAL

Chicago —(P)— Records of telephone calls from Gabriel Cincinqua, alleged Chicago bootlegger, to Robert W. Besse, former state's attorney of Whiteside-co., and other defendants have been admitted in evidence at the midwest liquor conspiracy trial of 35 defendants.

They were presented yesterday by Assistant U. S. District Attorney Dan Anderson to show that Cincinqua telephoned Besse at Sterling, Ill., and Mike Blumberg and Frank Probst at Clinton, Iowa.

Paul B. Shoop, a special prohibition agent and one of the government's last few witnesses, testified soon afterward that Blumberg, a Clinton bootlegger, told him when arrested that "if I beat this rap I'll be lucky."

There's no use telling you I'm not in the racket," he quoted Blumberg as saying. "I made a lot of money and I'm in the stock market. I'm not a hoodlum but I made mistakes of not getting out a year ago."

Mostly cloudy tonight and Friday, snow tonight in north and extreme east portion; colder tonight, and in extreme southeast portion Friday.

General Weather

A trough of low pressure extending from the Great Lakes to Texas has caused light rain or snow in the lake region and upper Mississippi Valley and rising temperature in the central and eastern portions of the country. This disturbance is followed by high pressure over the north Pacific coast which is bringing fair and slightly colder to most of the western states this morning. Low pressure which now overlies northwestern Canada is causing temperatures to rise throughout that district. Light snow and slightly cold is expected in this section tonight, followed by fair and continuing rain Friday.

"Trunk Slayer" Faces Court in Arizona

Pale, calm and well dressed, Mrs. Winnie Ruth Judd (indicated by arrow) is shown here with her attorneys in court at Phoenix, Ariz., where she went on trial charged with the "trunk murder" of Mrs. Agnes Lerol, X-ray technician. A separate murder indictment accuses Mrs. Judd of slaying Miss Helvig Samuelson, tubercular convalescent and friend of Mrs. Lerol. Seated at the counsel table above are, left to right: Attorneys Paul Schenck and J. B. Zaversack and Mrs. Judd.

Scientists Wonder Why Vesuvius' Light Is Out After Slight Earthquake

Naples, Italy —(P)—Ancient Vesuvius presented a new problem to scientists today after fresh growlings and explosions last night.

The problem is: Why has Vesuvius' light gone out?

No one was hurt by last night's demonstration which consisted of a light earthquake shock and loud explosive noises and rumblings underground.

As soon as the explosions ceased the crater, which always has been aglow at night by internal fires, had become cold, dark, and remained that way. Scientists today began an investigation to determine why.

An observatory, a military police barracks, a convent, a railroad and a hotel on the volcano's side "danced," reports said, during the disturbance, but remained upright. Their quake-proof construction saved them, observers said. The motion of the movement was perpendicular and they were actually lifted up and set down again. Many of the occupants were asleep at the time, but they vacated the buildings afterward and huddled on the mountain, wondering what the raspy old hill would do next.

Attendees at the observatory worked through the night, but learned little except that the epicenter of the quake was within, or under, the mountain and it apparently affected only a small area.

The rumblings continued two hours.

RUSSIAN CHORUS USES PASSPORTS GIVEN BY LEAGUE

All Are Men Who Left Russia and Who Have Pledged No Other Allegiance

The Don Cossack Russian Male Chorus of 36, Serge Jaroff conductor, scheduled for a concert in this city Tuesday evening at Lawrence Memorial chapel, is the first large organization to visit this country traveling on passports issued by the League of Nations. These passports are the so-called "Nansen Passes" issued to former residents of Russia who departed or were expelled from their country at the time of the revolution and have since pledged no allegiance to any other government.

Nansen, Norwegian delegate to the League of Nations at that time (he has since died), conceived the idea of issuing this international passport to the several hundred thousand emigres, and the stamp affixed to these passes bears his portrait. The usual requirements of name, age, residence and race are filled out on the passport, and the inscription opposite "residence" is uniform for all 36 of the Cossacks. The words are: "En Voyage."

Thus, it can truly be said of these singers that they are "men without a country."

The Don Cossacks are said to be the costliest attraction ever imported to this country. They made their first American tour last season and now return for a more extended tour from coast to coast, with the phenomenal record of 100 concerts in 20 weeks. In addition to the Pacific coast, the Don Cossack will include the south in their itinerary.

The Cossacks, who have given 1,500 concerts in Europe and Australia in the last six years, bring a new stirring note to the concert hall. Their numbers range from the delicate pianissimo of ancient Russian hymns to the stirring soldier songs interspersed with shouts and catcalls sung by the Cossacks on the march.

LIBEL TRIAL ON IN FOREST-CO FACTION'S ROW

Crandon Editor Denies Charge He Frequented Langlade-co Roadhouse

Wisconsin Rapids —(P)— Herman Kronschnabl, editor and publisher of the Forest Republican, a weekly newspaper at Crandon, Wis., denied in circuit court late yesterday that he had been a habitual frequenter of a Langlade-co roadhouse.

Kronschnabl was testifying in the trial of W. D. Connor, Sr., Marshfield lumberman and former lieutenant governor of Wisconsin, whom he is suing for $25,000 damages on a libel charge. In an article published above his name in the Laona, Wis., Tribune, March 3, 1927, Connor claimed Kronschnabl was a frequenter of the roadhouse. The article is the basis of the libel action.

Kronschnabl testified he had visited the roadhouse but twice, and that was in the daytime.

Sidley L. Crawford, an inmate of Waupun prison, serving a term for complicity in a robbery at Crandon, said he lived at the roadhouse, the Marigold Gardens, for seven days. One night, about 12 o'clock, he said, he saw Kronschnabl, accompanied by the chief of police of Crandon, take a drink at the roadhouse bar.

Political strife that has raged in Forest-co for nearly 40 years, between the so-called Connor faction and its opponents was recalled when H. W. Krueger of Oconto, a former district attorney of Forest-co, took the stand.

Krueger spoke of the 157 indictments brought by a grand jury in 1926 after an investigation into Forest-co affairs. Many of the persons indicted never went to trial, he said, among them Kronschnabl and W. D. Connor, Jr.

Major Robert Connor, brother of the defendant, was questioned about an alleged attempt made by Kronschnabl in 1923 to purchase the Laona Tribune, of which Connor was a major stockholder. He said he refused to discuss the proposal with Kronschnabl because he did not like his business associate.

The defense was expected to rest about noon today. More than 50 witnesses have been subpoenaed for the plaintiff.

ONLY TWO WEEKS REMAIN TO GET 1932 CAR PERMITS

Only about two weeks remain for Appleton and Outagamie-co car owners to make application for their 1932 auto licenses, according to a joint warning issued today by Sheriff John Lappen and Police Chief George T. Prim. The officers point out that under instructions from the secretary of state they are instructing men working under them to arrest all motorists who cannot furnish proof after Feb. 1 that they have made application for their car licenses. Chief Prim said that the excuse of ignorance could not be accepted because motorists have had sufficient advance warning that they must make application for their licenses before Feb. 1.

A majority of mounts used by the Pong Express were half-breed California mustangs.

THE YELLO LOAN

$2,000,000,000

Here are two of the chief officers of President Hoover's new $2,000,000,000 reconstruction corporation, now being organized to stabilize hands and business and create confidence. Charles G. Dawes, left, is president of the corporation, and Eugene Meyer, right, governor of the Federal Reserve Board, is chairman of the directors of the finance company, which will make loans to banks, building and loan companies and other organizations, according to tentative plans.

Chicago —(P)—Samuel Insull, Jr., was given a gold medal last night because he is a "go-getter."

The Chicago Junior Association of Commerce presented the award describing him as "the young man under 35 years of age who has performed the most meritorious civic service in Chicago during the year 1931." It is the first such award made by the organization and they plan to make it annually.

Mr. Insull was chosen from among hundreds of candidates by a distinguished committee to receive the honor, and it came to him in recognition of his work as chairman of the joint emergency relief fund for Cook-co. This organization solicited, collected and has almost entirely disbursed more than $10,000,000 for the relief of unemployed wage earners in the county. It was done with a total overhead cost of less than one-half of 1 per cent.

In addition to a sizeable cash contribution to the fund, Insull took a leave of absence from his duties as vice-chairman of five of the largest of the huge group of Insull utility companies and from Oct. 1 to Dec. 15 gave his entire attention to the tremendous work of collecting the money to be used for relief. He served without pay.

The "Junior Insull," as he is known to many business associates, is vice-chairman and second only to his father, on the boards of: Peoples Gas Light and Coke company, Commonwealth Edison company, Midland United company, Middle West Utilities company, and the Public Service Company of Northern Illinois.

He is young, less than 32 years of age, but enjoys the rare distinction of having been cast for his position of an executive in the utility business before he was born. His father, Samuel Insull, trained him from childhood to that end.

Council Kills Ordinance Creating Commissioner Of Public Works

MEASURE WOULD HAVE ABOLISHED 2 CITY OFFICES

Proposal Turned Down by Unanimous Vote of Aldermen Last Night

The ordinance proposing the establishment of the office of commissioner of public works, and consequently the abolition of the offices of city engineer and street commissioner, was killed by the common council Wednesday evening. The council voted unanimously against the proposed change.

Answering the criticism that the proposed ordinance was originated by him, Mayor Johnston said, Jr. explained that he crystallized action on the proposed change at the request of five aldermen. He made it plain that he was heartily in favor of the ordinance, chiefly because he felt it would mean economy in the engineering and street departments. He said that the upkeep of the engineering department and the executive staff of the street department cost $14,000 annually, and that last year the engineer's department cost $7,000. A commissioner of public works, he felt, would effect great savings in both departments, and bring greater efficiency in both departments.

Alderman Steinhauer reiterated his conviction that there is no need for a commissioner of public works, and that both departments are efficiently managed now.

Opposed By Builders

A resolution from the Master Builders association of Appleton voicing opposition to the proposed ordinance was read. The communication indicated that the association feels that the present departments are efficiently operated, and that a third class city needs a full-time engineer for the economic supervision of public construction.

The presentation of the annual report of the fire department brought commendation of the 1931 record of the fire department from the mayor. He said that fire losses in the city last year were less than $15,000, and that in the past 10 years losses amounted to $875,000, a figure which included $250,000 during that same period the citizens of Appleton paid $1,600,000 in fire insurance premiums, which means that insurance companies cleared $75,000 a year in Appleton during the past 10 years.

And then they have the nerve to ask us to build two more fire stations," the mayor commented.

The committee recommended that the Chicago and Northwestern railroad be permitted to remove the flagman at the N. Division-st and Outagamie-st crossings on Sundays was turned back to the committee for further investigation by an eight to four vote, Aldermen Earle, Gmeliner, Thompson and McGillan opposing its return.

W. J. Schenck Seizing

Aldermen Hasman and Wassenberg argued that it would be unwise to reduce any crossing protection in the city, and that economy was starting at the small end of the scale. They felt that more flagmen are needed in the city. Alderman Thompson, chairman of the street and bridge committee, explained that the flagmen at these crossings are needed only when trains are switching to the automatic signals will not block traffic when it is unnecessary, and that on Sundays, when there is no switching, the flagmen could be eliminated.

A communication from the board of education asking that the Salvation Army hall, which is now used only for charitable and school purposes, be exempt from a light tax was referred to the city attorney, and another request for a rebate of the $4.82 tax on the First ward school, for sprinkling, was turned over to the rebate committee.

W. J. Schenck was named auditor of city books, the new Austin grader purchased recently was approved, bus licenses were granted to the Fox River Bus company and the Milwaukee Electric Railway and Light company, and a house movers license to Kennedy and Son.

Would Close Driveway

As a safety measure the driveway east of a post at the corner of Superior and Lawrence streets will be closed to traffic. Street lights will be placed at the corner of Spring and Summit-sts and on River-dr, and action on the request for a light on Newberry-st was deferred. Lots 1, 2, 3, and 4, block 28, Fifth ward were placed in the local business district.

An expression of appreciation from the Optimist club for the city's cooperation in the Christmas program was read, and an invitation to attend the next meeting of the American Legion was accepted.

The program will include a speech on An Effective Method of Combating Unemployment.

An offer of property near Park-way plat in the Fifth ward from R. S. Powell for $450 was referred to the street and bridge committee.

After arguing changes in the salary ordinance for nearly three hours in the committee of the whole the council adjourned until Thursday night, when city salaries will again be considered.

40 DEMOCRATS GOING TO MEET FROM OUTAGAMIE

Forty Outagamie-co Democrats will attend the state Democratic convention at Fond du Lac Saturday, according to Stephen Balliet, chairman of the Outagamie-co Democratic committee. The county is entitled to 20 delegates at the convention. Mr. Balliet said, inasmuch as 40 delegates will attend each will be entitled to one half a vote. It will be the first time in years, Mr. Balliet said, that every town, city and village of Outagamie-co will be represented at the meeting. Mr. Balliet has been named as a delegate to the national convention in Chicago in June from the ninth congressional district.

bagged by police during a week of raids at their alleged headquarters, are held without bond in the county jail, awaiting trial. One is a former assistant state attorney.

Foe of Racketeers

Fitchie, his wife said, long had been a militant foe against racketeers seeking to encroach upon the rich field of labor unionism. Besides being active in union affairs, Mrs. Fitchie said, he is a member of Governor Emmerson's unemployment relief commission.

The kidnaping occurred on Dec. 21 in Fitchie's yard. Two men carrying pistols overpowered him, put a hood over his head, forced him into their automobile, and drove away with him, his wife said. They drove, Mrs. Fitchie said her husband told her, to a house he believed is near suburban Cicero.

"His head was covered and his hands were taped behind his back," Mrs. Fitchie said. "For two days he was kept in an old-fashioned bed with a canvas canopy and given little food." Mrs. Fitchie said Ray Bryant and Steven Sumner, associate union officials, received demands for $50,000 ransom. Sumner, treasurer of the local union, said the fund among union members. On Dec. 23 Sumner drove to a far west side corner, left the $50,000 on the front seat of his car, walked around the block, and returned to find the money gone.

Two hours later, Fitchie, near collapse, staggered into his home, his wife related. He said he had been thrown from a moving automobile against a curb on the west side.

RAILWAY PRESIDENTS URGE WAGE REDUCTION

Chicago — (AP)—Railway presidents urged their organized employees today to accept a 10 per cent wage cut as an "essential step" in relieving the railroads and business in general, promising in return to do "whatever may be practicable" to relieve the fear of unemployment.

It was the president's day in the negotiations with rail unions and they took the occasion, not only to provide statistics showing the financial condition of the carriers, but also to answer each point in the labor program.

LEGION OPENS STATE DRIVE ON UNEMPLOYMENT

Appleton Veterans Will Hear Discussion Next Sunday at Elks Club

Appleton and Outagamie-co war veterans, employed and unemployed, will gather at the Elks club Sunday afternoon to hear discussions of the American legion's "Nine Point Employment Program" for national unemployment relief. The meeting is one of 60 to be held Sunday afternoon in Wisconsin cities.

Speakers here will be Marshall C. Graff, Appleton, and R. W. Baldwin, Green Bay. L. Hugo Keller, Appleton, will talk to Chilton veterans. Plans for the Appleton meeting are being handled by Alfred C. Bosser, post service officer. The speakers have been designated by state department unemployment committee workers.

Carrying out of the "Nine Point" program in communities throughout the state will be Wisconsin's campaign outlined recently in Washington and approved at a regional meeting of the legion at Chicago Tuesday. Representatives from 10 mid-western states met at the regional meeting.

The "Nine Point Employment Program," in outline, follows:

1. Employers to pledge continuous employment for all employees now on their payrolls until June 15, 1932, to the best of their ability.
2. Employers to be urged to increase the number of their employees by at least 10 per cent, staggering employment as to shortening the working day and week where necessary.
3. New employees to be engaged through city employment offices, such employees having a record of deserving employment and being residents of the city.

Seek Help Of Railways

4. Railroads and public utilities to be asked to make every effort to maintain steady employment during the winter months.

5. Building contractors, manufacturers and dealers in building material and "people with idle money to invest" are urged to co-operate with banks and building and loan societies in a movement to provide funds for home construction.

6. Every home owner in each city to be urged to pledge for a certain amount of labor, in the form of repairs and improvements, to be done during the winter months.

7. Residents of each and every block in each community to employ one man to do chores and errands at the prevailing wage per hour.

Work Guarantee Sought

Each householder to guarantee at least two hours work per week.

8. Promotion of necessary public works by city and county.
9. Co-operation of every citizen in every movement to relieve unemployment and confidence in banks, manufacturers, wholesalers and retailers.

Oney Johnston post veterans, while approving the plan suggested by the state department, have indicated a survey of the unemployment situation here shows Appleton employers are adhering to the features of the plan. A survey has revealed that about 175 persons in the city are out of work and that every effort is being made to find part time jobs for them.

The city of Appleton will try to employ more men in the street department, it was said today by Herbert H. Heble, Oney Johnston post commander. Work will be staggered and hours of men working shortened.

Oney Johnston post officers have designated their next regular meeting Feb. 1 as "unemployment relief night," and have invited Mayor John Dicker of Green Bay and Capt. R. H. Drum of Green Bay, organizers of the plan of employment now being suggested for the state, to speak.

SEEK CONVICT IN NEW ATTACK IN HONOLULU

Woman Identifies Assailant from Photograph at Police Station

Honolulu — (AP)—Honolulu was aroused today to a fresh manhunt by another attack upon a woman. Mrs. Toka Okazaki, mother of two children, complained to police she had been assaulted near John Rodgers airport by a man she identified through a photograph as Daniel Lyman, escaped Portuguese-Hawaiian murderer.

This assault occurred as authorities were preparing to place before the grand jury evidence in the lynching of Joseph Kahanawale, Hawaiian alleged attacker of a navy officer's wife and as the territorial legislature, in special session, was seeking a formula for better law enforcement to overcome hoodlumism in Honolulu.

It was the third serious assault case reported to authorities since last September when Mrs. Thomas R. Massie, strolling alone early in the morning after leaving a party, was the asserted victim of five youths. The five later were tried, the jury disagreeing six to six. The four still alive are awaiting retrial.

Mrs. Massie's mother, Mrs. Granville Portecuse of New York and Washington; her husband, Lieutenant Massie, U. S. N., and two navy enlisted men, Albert O. Jones and E. J. Lard, have been charged with slaying the fifth man, Kahanawale.

Stopped By Shot

Mrs. Okazaki said she went morning last evening with Takeo Harimoto, driving toward the airport, which is six miles from the center of the city in the direction of Pearl Harbor. Returning, they had passed near the entrance of the air field, when a shot was heard.

Harimoto said he looked out of the car and was stunned with a blow from a revolver. Recovering, he said the gunman made him back the automobile about 50 feet, get out and march to the nearby railroad tracks to which he was bound with a fish line.

Mrs. Okazaki said the gunman then returned toward the car, caught her when she tried to escape, robbed her of $125 and assaulted her. Then he fled.

"Do you know who I am?" She said no, and he asked her address. Putting her in the car, he drove her to her home in the Palama district, she said, and then disappeared. Meanwhile Harimoto, freeing himself, reached a telephone at the airport and called police.

The police took Harimoto and later Mrs. Okazaki to headquarters here, where she was shown Lyman's picture. She said it was the same man, although her attacker wore a beard. Police noted just three weeks had passed since Lyman escaped from Oahu penitentiary in company with Lui Kaikapu who was sent back there for life after assaulting a white school teacher during his few hours of liberty.

NEW DISTRICT BILL PASSED BY ASSEMBLY

Measure Practically Same Passed Last Session by Badger Lower House

Madison — (AP)—The perplexing task of converting the 11 Wisconsin congressional districts into 10 to conform with the 1930 census was completed in the assembly today when the lower house voted approval of the Tremain bill by a 55 to 30 vote. The bill now goes to the senate.

If the senate approves the measure and it is signed by the governor, Congressmen James Freat of Hudson, and Gerald Boileau of Wausau, will be pitted against each other in the same district. The bill is practically the same as one passed by the assembly at the last session but which was caught in the senate filibuster.

Proponents of the Tremain plan assured passage of the bill when they acceded to the demands of Milwaukee Socialists to switch the Republican 15th ward from the Fifth to the Fourth district. The change will add Socialists in securing the seat formerly held by the late Congressman Victor Berger and now held by Congressman W. H. Stafford.

The new districts set up by the bill, introduced by Assemblyman Ben Tremain, Hustler, are as follows:

First — Green, Kenosha, Racine, Rock and Walworth.

Second — Dodge, Green Lake, Jefferson, Ozaukee, Sheboygan, Washington and Waukesha.

Third — Columbia, Crawford, Dane, Grant, Lafayette, Richland.

Fourth — Milwaukee.

Fifth — Milwaukee.

Sixth — Calumet, Fond du Lac, Manitowoc, Marquette, Waupaca, Waushara, Winnebago.

Seventh — Adams, Buffalo, Jackson, Juneau, La Crosse, Monroe, Portage, Sauk, Trempealeau, Vernon, Wood.

Eighth — Brown, Door, Florence, Forest, Kewaunee, Langlade, Marinette, Oconto, Outagamie, Shawano.

Ninth — Chippewa, Clark, Dunn, Eau Claire, Marathon, Pepin, Pierce, St. Croix, and Taylor.

Tenth — Ashland, Barron, Bayfield, Burnett, Douglas, Iron, Lincoln, Oneida, Polk, Price, Sawyer, Vilas, Washburn.

$10,792 SPENT BY COUNTY IN OUTDOOR RELIEF

Clerk Prepares Report on Aid Given in 1931 for State Board of Control

Outagamie-co extended relief to 324 persons during 1931 totalling $10,792.29 according to a report prepared by John E. Hantschel, county clerk, for the state board of control. The money consists of funds expended in "outdoor" relief to people who are county charges. In addition the county appropriated $5,000 for relief of indigent soldiers and sailors and their families and $650 for the Children's Home Finding society.

The amount extended in aid during 1931 exceeds by $1,500 the amount spent in 1930 and more than three times the amount spent in 1929. Mr. Hantschel's records show:

In 1930 the amount spent was $5,148.02 to aid 390 persons. In 1930 the county appropriated $5,000 for soldiers and sailors relief and $400 for the home finding group. In 1929 the county spent only $3,298.39 aiding 84 persons. The amount spent for soldiers and sailors relief that year was $3,500 and the home finding association received $400. In 1928 the county extended aid to 321 persons for a total of $4,140.69. Soldiers and sailors relief work that year cost $2,527.25 and the home finding group received $400.

COOPERATION IS KIWANISM NEED, OFFICER HOLDS

Unlimited Personal Work Is Necessary, Appleton Club Told

Individual cooperation and unlimited personal work is needed in Kiwanism to carry out the organization's program successfully, Dr. Charles Gleason, Manitowoc, lieutenant-governor for the eastern division of Kiwanis International, told the Appleton club Wednesday noon at Conway hotel.

The tremendous scope of Kiwanism work, especially that which involves the underprivileged child program, needs the cooperation of every member, the speaker stated. He urged members to lend a helping hand whenever the occasion presents itself.

Although it is not always necessary for a Kiwanis member engaged in the medical profession to remove the tonsils or adenoids of a child, he can, however, help the child receive that treatment which is offered by the city, county or state, Mr. Gleason said. It is the duty of every Kiwanis member to see that such aid is given.

Discussing inter-club programs, the speaker said that a sponsoring club should never desert a newly organized group, but should continue to work with it. He stressed the importance of doing "mission work" in new fields where clubs could be organized.

Kiwanis members also should participate in an extensive visiting program, he urged. During the summer, when they are off on vacations to distant cities, members should not forget to visit the clubs in other cities.

He pointed out that much can be learned about the variety in Kiwanis work by visiting clubs in other cities. He also stated that visitation of other clubs helped attendance records.

Mr. Gleason, who yesterday paid the club a formal visit on his division tour, met with board of directors and club committees in the offices of Paul Cary, Sr., Wednesday evening. Mrs. Gleason was entertained by Kiwanis women at a luncheon at the Amber Tea room Wednesday afternoon.

EASIEST WAY TO BREAK UP A COLD

Millions Say of This Proved Way Works Fast—Makes You Feel Like a New Person Before You Know It

If you want quick relief from a cold, go back to first principles and use something you know does the business — don't start "trying" a lot of fancy ideas or remedies. Even a "little" cold is too dangerous to take chances on.

Get Hill's Cascara Quinine. A scientific formula made to do ONE THING WELL: to knock a cold in a jiffy, not to cure a hundred different things.

Take two tablets every three hours. Drink lots of water between times—that's all. Soon those mean, aching pains in head and body begin to go; the cold breaks up; poisons leave your system. Almost before you know it, you feel like a new person.

If it doesn't do that, your money back. Get a box now. You'll be surprised at the speed with which it works. Costs only a few cents.

Spitzerinktons Center Of Argument Among Senators

Washington —(AP)—Spitzerinktons have joined politics, taxes and appropriations as subjects for senate debate.

The dean of that body, Senator Smith of Utah, waved his arms Tuesday and called for elimination of "gimcrackers and spizerinktons" from Washington's ancient and ornate state department building. Government architects look down their noses at the non-classical structure, seek millions to turn it into a chastely columned building. Economical congressmen have blue-pencilled the item.

"What manner of decoration?" inquired Senator J. Ham Lewis of Illinois, who insists on elegant English. "Gimcrackers and spizerinktons!" shouted back Smart.

"They were stylish once," protested Senator Norris of Nebraska. "No, not then and they never will be," insisted Smart.

Senator McKellar of Tennessee, rushed to the defense of the ancient structure, saying he was there just today. "Did you see any spizerinktons?" asked Norris.

"I didn't know where to look," confessed McKellar.

"I am not a student to art and architecture," said Norris. "but I confess I have a deep liking for the state building and also for the condemned and stately postoffice building on the avenue. I didn't know it before, but I guess I have a special liking for gimcrackers and spizerinktons. I am afraid the senator from Utah came into contact with a gimcracker that got away from him or let a spizerinkton get the best of him."

Senator Jones of Washington rushed in too: "I have a great admiration for gimcrackers and spizerinktons and I am going to stand by the building."

The upshot was McKellar announced he would introduce legislation to keep as it is the old state department building, spizerinktons and all.

EIGHT MARRIAGE APPLICATIONS MADE THIS MONTH

The month of January will set a new record for scarcity of marriage licenses and for divorces if the pace set in the 20 days is continued. There have been but eight applications for marriage licenses to date, and but one divorce. The "depression" is to blame for the failure of young couples to get married and the married couples to seek divorces.

TIME FOR ANOTHER EXPLOSION
When Jake Lingle, the reporter, became the victim of Chicago gangdom, the hue and cry of the press became so violent as to blow the roof off of the structure that had been so flagrantly erected in that community by crime and politics. The blast echoed in every journalistic press-room of the nation. The crime apparently challenged the right of the press to the free and unhampered search for news and the expression of opinion.

Granted the justification for this wave of widespread public indignation, it is a matter of regret that its effects could not have been more far-reaching, more fruitful in exposing the ramifications and the trails which led to the citadels of those who directed this sinister organization of crime and terrorism. But another ruthless killing has occurred on the streets of Chicago which should stir the public to still greater indignation.

This was the murder of Benjamin Rosenberg, manager of the International Cleaners and Dyers, Inc. He had refused to join a trade association because he believed it practised the principles of racketeering and extortion. He had refused to be intimidated by the threats of those who had "muscle" into the cleaning and dyeing industry to exact money in lieu of violence. He had gone a step farther in protecting his individual liberty by attempting to expose how legitimate business was being preyed upon, and was to have been a key witness in the prosecution of a case brought against persons accused of illegal acts.

Rosenberg was slugged and riddled with bullets while on his way home to his wife and three children. His fight for justice and the right to liberty in the pursuit of his business is over. When a good citizen is murdered on the streets because he dared defy lawlessness in the protection of his business and his home, it becomes a matter, certainly of as great importance to the public as the right to the free dissemination of news.

No power of the press was his guard or protection. He fought alone hoping for the support of law and order which came too late. His ruthless murder strikes at the very heart of democracy and individual liberty. It is a crime equally as deserving as Lingle's murder for turning loose the bloodhounds of justice to search out the cowardly perpetrators. It is an occasion for another violent eruption of the public conscience.

WHY MEXICO IS MEXICO
With a fine flourish of outraged feelings because a ticket seller for the Pullman Company gave a drawing room reserved for the foreign minister to someone else, a fine of 50,000 pesos, about $20,000, has been imposed by the Mexican government upon that company, which will indicate the highly excitable and temperamental nature of the rulers in a land where pride is rated at such a pitch that a slip of the pen may become a deadly insult and throbbing emotions must be assuaged somehow.

Never should the punishment for any offense be weighed without considerable stress upon the factor of intention. The wilful doing of a wrong must always be set apart from either an error of judgment, a momentary lapse of memory or just a plain blunder.

The Pullman Company perhaps can stand this loss more than the Mexican government can afford to inflict the penalty. The latter has apparently overlooked the fact that no officer of the Pullman Company committed the wrong, no board of directors approved it and not even a stockholder knew it was taking place.

Corporations with an extensive business must transact that business through hundreds and sometimes thousands of employees, for whose errors it may be entirely just to hold it responsible for actual damages. But in the infliction of such a penalty for a trivial mistake caused by the lapse of a minor employee of the company, the Mexican officials have only shown a hotheaded bias and an intemperate stumbling of judgment which may long hold the prize for stupidity.

SURVEY OF FEDERAL EXPENDITURES

The per capita cost of running the Federal government for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1931 was $34.01. Twenty years ago, in 1911, the cost stood at $7.89, which was the highest since 1870 when it was $8.01. During the period of the Civil war and the years immediately following the peak was $37.01, only three dollars more than the figure for 1931.

From 1911 until our entrance into the World war this per capita cost did not go above eight dollars. In 1917 the cost balloon broke from its moorings, rising to $19.36, to $22.58 in 1918, and on June 30, 1919 it mounted to the extraordinary height of $176.40.

The cessation of the war combined with the high rate of taxation resulting from it, rapidly reduced the cost to $60.91 in 1920, and then each following year showed a decline until the amount reached $29.45 in 1927, since when it has been climbing steadily.

Reductions during the period 1920-1927 came from savings in fixed charges due to payments on principal of the public debt. Despite this, however, the per capita cost remained nearly four times that of any year in the half century preceding the World war.

Since 1927, the rise in governmental cost is due to new obligations resulting from increased bureau expenses, additional payments to veterans, paternalistic expenditures, and deficits created by falling income.

The net result of the estimated savings of millions of dollars here and the suggested spending of other millions elsewhere will be graphically shown in the per capita rate next June. That it will show an increase is certain, but 1933 should begin to indicate a return to lesser figures in government costs.

NEW CANCER DEVELOPMENTS

The search of science for the cause of cancer and its cure goes on with never-ending patience. Now and then a glimmer of hope is aroused that the trail to the inner sanctuary of the tomb which holds the secret of this malignant disease has been uncovered, only to be lost again in a seemingly impenetrable wilderness.

However, The American Journal of Cancer is authority for new and interesting developments which may eventually lead to the elusive solution so long sought after.

The Research Institute of the Cancer Hospital, London, England reports successful experiments in the production and transmission of cancer in mice.

It has been noted that certain English workers engaged in industries using heavy lubricating oils were especially subject to this disease. The experiments were unique in that the investigators began with the assumption that the cancer was caused by chemicals in these oils having certain fluorescent properties as shown by the spectroscope. Determining the oil which was most effective in producing cancer in animals, the fluorescence of its chemical compounds enabled them to produce a synthetic chemical with like properties, which in turn was found to be most effective in producing the disease. The next step is to find which is the guilty element in the compound.

Comment by officials of the Crocker Institute of Cancer Research, Columbia University, characterizes the experiments as unique and important "in that they suggest the possibility that cancer may be produced by the presence of certain chemicals in the human body, originating either in the body itself or entering from some outside source."

These new developments offer the hope of brighter trails to come. Having scientifically produced the disease of cancer, the determination of the cause in the particular cases now under experiment may reasonably be expected, which will constitute a major step forward to ultimate victory.

THE FOLKS back in the sunny southland which we call home, huh, are clanking the axvil loudly in our ears. "Where," they ask, "are those walloping big Wisconsin winters you told us about?" "What has happened to the thermometers you boasted about—the ones which have markings clear down to fifty below zero?" "What happened to your ten foot snowdrifts?" "When is it going to get so cold that people up your way can't talk because the words freeze as they come out and drop to the frozen pavement with a loud clink?" "It's terrible, folks, terrible. . . . If something in the way of a good, old-fashioned Wisconsin winter doesn't happen pretty soon, we'll nevaah, nevaah be able to face the home-folks again"

Another one of those queer in-law things is going to happen again, and we're all balled up. Anyway, it seems that over in Baraboo, the father of a married son is going to marry his son's wife's mother. This makes him his son's father-in-law as well as his father and it makes his new wife her daughter's mother-in-law. And it makes us goofy trying to figure it out.

Just what is a champion and when does he have to do anything about it? It seems that the New York State Athletic commission has patted Max Schmeling on the forehead and said, "Sure, postpone your fighting until this summer." Meanwhile the Illinois athletic commission has called Schmeling a bum and has asked the National Boxing association to give him the air. This faction maintains that Schmeling has kept his title with a lot of heavy talking. But who cares, anyway?

Meanwhile, the reformers keep trying to purify college athletics!

Michigan officials, the attorney general over there says, can cut their own salaries if they want to. Which probably makes it legal, anywhere. Yes, yes, indeed, not only should officials be allowed to cut their salaries—indeed, Tillie, they ought to be urged.

Speaking about public economy—the British have been busy at work on the world's largest flying boat. Now, all operations have been called to a halt and the boat will be dismantled. It was, incidentally, three-quarters finished.

COMPANY TIMES

When Ma's expecting company
She gets all hot and fluttry.
And says: "Oh, me! Oh, my! Oh, dear!
I'm busy now, they'll be here
Before we've a word at the stairs
And dusted all the parlor chairs!
Good gracious! It is half-past one,
And I've still got my apron on!"

When Ma is going to entertain
Her club, coz it's her turn again,
She sends us children out to play
And asks us kindly please to stay
An' not come runnin' in an' out
Or hang around the door an' shout.
She doesn't want her friends to see
How big a nuisance we can be.

When Ma's expecting company
The neighbors all come in to see
Just how she's fixed the parlor chairs
An' where they'll leave their wraps upstairs,
An' how the curtains drape, an' they Stand round an' talk, till Ma says: "Hey!
Get out of here. It's half past one!
An' I've still got my apron on!"

The S. A. Cook armory at Neenah was completed and was to be dedicated Feb. 7. The structure cost $17,000.

Dan Boyle left the previous day for Atlantic, Iowa, where he was to spend a week at the home of his mother.

A number of friends surprised Miss Adelaide Rechner at her home, corner of Elginth and Elm-sts, the previous evening.

Mr. and Mrs. J. S. Van Nortwick and daughter, Mary, left the previous day for Chicago where they were to spend the remainder of the week.

William Fountain was spending a week with his brother at Donald, Taylor-co.

The west was then in the grip of one of the most severe cold waves the winter, the weather bureau reported that day. It had extended from the upper Mississippi valley southward nearly to the Mexican border with a severe freeze in northern and central California.

Karl Schuetter left that day on a weekend business trip to Chicago.

Miss Louise Pauly had returned from Milwaukee where she attended the marriage of Dr. James Rolfe, Appleton, and Miss Lillian M. Hintz, in Green Bay.

Personal Health Talks

A SINGER GETS RID OF HER TONSILS

Young woman studying for operatic career had tonsils markedly unequal in size and consistency, the left being ten times the size of the right and peculiarly indurated. That means hardened. You see, the doctor didn't just look at her tonsils. He felt of them. He is a good doctor. I've never met him, but plenty of his patients have told me about his work.

At first he feared he was confronted with some such condition as sarcoma, carcinoma or possibly lymphatic leukemia, for he had seen such cases occasionally. So he kept the patient under observation for a time and checked up on the blood picture, with negative results. Having satisfied himself that there was no such grave condition the doctor gave his patient the electro-coagulation treatment (diathermy) and after the fourth sitting she reported a definite improvement in her voice.

This same happy result might have been obtained from the old-fashioned surgical removal of the tonsil, though at greater actual risk to the patient's life and to her voice, I believe.

According to the actual pathological examination of tonsils removed by good doctors in a clinic or dispensary (Welsh, Jour. A. M. A., Vol. 89, No. 26, Dec. 24, 1927) 139 out of a thousand such tonsils have fragments of throat muscle attached. While it does not follow that the voice will be affected if a bit of throat muscle happens to be included in the bite of the guillotine or the slice of the snare, we must admit that such crude surgery is not very helpful for singers, speakers or others who are anxious to keep a good voice. I say crude surgery, for I believe the most skillful removal of tonsils by the very best of throat surgeons is a crude procedure, when done in the old-fashioned way by guillotine and snare, compared with the modern method of electro-coagulation by diathermy.

Unskilled doctors, or throat specialists may do bungling work with diathermy, of course. But given an intelligent patient, I think the chances are the patient will discontinue the treatment if the doctor is a bungling sort, before serious damage is done when diathermy is used, whereas the patient has little chance to escape if the old Spanish method is used.

The more I see of the results of diathermy treatment of infected tonsils and of the bloody method, the more I regret that the modern bloodless method is not suitable for children under five or six years of age. Such young patients cannot give the doctor the cooperation he must have from the patient. The old-fashioned guillotine and snare or dissection method is still the method of choice for young children. Happily the present trend is away from the practice of removing children's tonsils.

The observations made by Dr. Kaiser of Rochester, N. Y., have caused most good physicians to take a more conservative view of this question, for as Kaiser's investigations have proved, it is doubtful whether a young child benefits from the operation, even when the tonsils are definitely infected. Certainly good doctors no longer countenance the removal of merely large tonsils in early childhood.

be likely to have diabetes? (Miss M. S. P.)

Answer—No reason to believe diabetes is hereditary. I'd say go ahead and marry and multiply, and let me know when the first bambino arrives. If you are sugar-free and in fair nutrition why not marry?

The Tynmites
By Hal Cochran

"NOW," said the giant, "You must pay for naughty things you've done today. You tied me with that big long rope and thought that I'd be stuck. But I am strong as strong can be and no rope ever captured me. Your plan was fine, I must admit, but you just had bad luck."

"Oh, go, what will you do with us?" We're sorry if we've made a fuss," said Scouty. "Please be lenient. We will promise to be good. Just name some work that you want done and we will do it. 'Twill be fun. Whatever you have asked us, we have done the best we could."

"That's fair enough," the giant said. And then he stood and scratched his head. "I'll think of some real work for you. Just wait a minute. Now. Ah, ha! I have it. Follow me and what I have in mind you'll see. This job won't be so hard to do, when I have shown you how."

He led them to the barnyard where he said, "See that corn over there?" The Tynites eyed the corn. It was the biggest ever grown. The giant then continued, "I want all you little tots to try to drag a cob up to my house and do it all alone."

"All right," said Scouty. "We just hope that we can do it. Where's a rope? We'll tie it round the cob of corn and drag it over the ground." They started searching here and there. Then Scouty's voice broke through the air. "All right, lads! We are ready now. A big rope I have found."

The rope was shortly tied up tight. Said Scouty, "Pull with all your might! Just throw the rope across your shoulders. Then we'll haul away." And, as they slowly tugged along the giant said, "My, but you're strong. When you have finished, that will be a job well done today."

A Bystander In Washington

BY HERBERT PLUMMER

Washington — It's a democrat of the old school who sits in that seat of the mighty—the chairmanship of the house ways and means committee—as congress approaches this ticklish proposition of increasing taxes.

His name is James W. Collier. He hails from Vicksburg, Miss., and is one of the veterans of the house of representatives.

Collier's committee will consider all proposals advanced to increase the country's revenues. His post is one of the most powerful in congress.

A cautious man who is thorough in everything he attempts, the Mississippiian has centered his long career in congress around the ways and means committee. He has been in congress continuously since 1903 and all but four of these 23 years he has sat on ways and means.

Work Begun Already
Already Collier has had his baptism as chairman of this committee. And it was with one of the most important issues ever to come before the congress—the moratorium on war debts.

True, passage of the moratorium was virtually assured from the start, but at the same time it had to be considered and passed in orderly fashion. The burden in the house rested on Collier's shoulders.

His speech in favor of the moratorium, which a majority of his committee had reported out favorably, was a rather tame affair. Not much opportunity was afforded to judge what might be expected of him in the way of leadership in the future when more controversial issues arise.

A better estimate will be had as ways and means and congress roll on further into taxes and the tariff.

Until democratic control of the house thrust him forward into such a position of prominence, Collier remained more or less in the background as far as his activity on the floor was concerned. By nature he is rather quiet.

About the only time he forgets taxes, tariff and the like is when he takes down a fishing pole and tries his luck in streams around picturesque old Vicksburg.

Today and Tomorrow

Mr. Lippmann, formerly editor of the New York World, is one of the foremost liberal thinkers in the country. He has complete freedom of expression in the articles appearing under his signature.

BY WALTER LIPPMANN
THE PROJECT FOR A MORATORIUM IN STATESMANSHIP
SEMI-OFFICIAL note issued in Paris on Monday says that "it seems to be agreed now in Paris and London" to offer Germany an extension of the Hoover moratorium for six months or a year and to ask the United States to grant the same relief to its debtors. If this is the agreement in London and Paris, it will compel the President to decide whether to go before Congress this spring and ask for an extension of the moratorium. It will not be an easy decision for him to make.

It is true, of course, that Congress has not yet declared against an extension of the moratorium. It has declared only against revision of the settlements. Therefore, it might be argued that the Franco-British project does not call for a reversal of the strict letter of the congressional declaration. But, in fact, the temper of Congress is such that it is extremely improbable that a vote could now be obtained approving an extension of the moratorium. Had the vote been obtained last June the moratorium would almost certainly have been defeated in December.

Apparently, it is not yet understood in Europe why it is that the moratorium which was so popular in June had become so unpopular in December. The reason for this change of opinion is plain enough to Americans. They have lived through six months of moratorium in which world conditions, including American, have become seriously worse, and for them there is no longer any magic in moratoria. As to the reasons for this result, there can be much argument; as to the fact, none.

But this much may, I think, be said with safe assurance. The Hoover moratorium was like a very dangerous drug which administered at precisely the right moment and supplemented promptly with genuinely curative measures, might have started Europe towards convalescence. Its efficacy depended upon the willingness of the European nations to seek real solutions under its temporarily stimulating effect. The drug was unskillfully administered, there was no enough statesmanship in Europe to carry through successfully an operation of such magnitude and delicacy. The disorders in Europe grew worse. Then the moratorium, instead of promoting confidence, undermined it by advertising the fact that the obligations of contracts had been impaired. The moratorium was followed, not by the reorganization and readjustments required, but by recrimination, political paralysis and successive measures of partial or total default.

Thus today a proposal to extend the moratorium is simply an announcement of political bankruptcy. It is hard to see what attractions the proposal can have for the American people. They are asked to help the European governments dodge the responsibility of dealing with the reparations problem, and it will not be easy to convince them that this is to their advantage or to anyone else's. For it is one thing to be a lenient and generous creditor; it is quite another thing to encourage the debtor to continue doing the very things which have produced his difficulties.

For these reasons there can be no conflicting opinions about the fact that a European settlement of reparations is an indispensable condition of European recovery. Two committees of experts, representing all the European powers concerned, have made authoritative and urgent declarations to this effect. What then, is to be gained by assenting to this proposal to postpone the problem another six months or a year? What is to be lost by declining to assent? These are the two questions we are called upon to decide if the plan outlined in the French semi-official note is adopted.

The only visible gain from assenting would be made by M. Laval. Postponement would assuage his political difficulties by increasing Mr. Hoover's. M. Laval does not dare to beard the French chamber before his elections, so it is suggested that Mr. Hoover beard Congress before the American elections. That will not, I imagine, appeal to Mr. Hoover, and I do not see why it should. Mr. Laval came here in October and asked for the initiative in settling Europe's affairs, and there is no reason why Mr. Laval should be permitted to hand back this initiative which he so pressingly desired.

From an economic point of view there is really nothing to be said for another six or twelve months of postponement. The condition of Central Europe is becoming worse and another twelve months of uncertainty, of agitation, of diplomatic maneuvering, of economic stagnation, anything better at the end of the period, can only hasten the flight of capital, deepen the distress and intensify the agony. The situation is not one which can be frozen and held where it is. It is a situation where everything is in movement, and things must either become better or worse.

Finally the whole plan rests upon the fatal illusion that Europe does nothing but let matters drift. We shall all wake up some morning to find Congress and the American voters prepared to cancel the debts. It is difficult to have patience with such naïveté.

SEE ROOSEVELT AS EASY WINNER OF NOMINATION

If Opponents Hope to Defeat New York Governor They Must Do Something Soon

BY RODNEY DUTCHER

Washington—There's a lot of dispute about this, but one guesses that some concrete thing must happen or be brought about if the anti-Roosevelt leaders in the Democratic party are to be able to keep the nomination away from the New York governor at the Chicago convention five months hence.

Al Smith might speak up and alter the picture considerably. Governor Ritchie of Maryland might force ahead as a strong runner-up to Roosevelt, either by defeating the latter in the Pennsylvania primaries where they are expected to fight for delegates or by a combination of support among anti-Roosevelt forces. Or someone else might unexpectedly accumulate a flock of delegates and shape up as a real contender.

But the present theory that Roosevelt can be blocked by a huge field of favorite son delegations which may or may not comprise a majority seems rather weak. It's all very cute, of course, if that's really the theory of the stop-Roosevelt politicians. Nevertheless, if the governor shows up on the first ballot with even a minimum of 400 delegates and the rest of the vote column shows a long string of also-rans headed by Senator Ham Lewis of Illinois with only 55 delegates, it's a splendid bet that the rush to Roosevelt will give him at least a majority on the second ballot. And a majority at that convention, nearly everyone agrees, will mean victory even though the party still maintains its antiquated two-thirds rule.

No one but Roosevelt has yet shown any substantial delegate strength outside his own state. Someone will have to be built up by the opposition leaders or by an impressive run in the forthcoming presidential primaries—as no one now seems likely to do. As long as Smith and Newton D. Baker stay out of the race the only candidate who may be conceded a chance to do anything outside the home grounds is Ritchie of Maryland who has the support of important Pennsylvania leaders. If Ritchie won a majority of Pennsylvania's 76 delegates his stock would soar and Roosevelt would suffer.

There will be 1154 delegates, with 770 necessary to nominate. Thus, the Roosevelt opposition figures that 385 votes will block the governor. One hears that they hope to have 500 or more favorite son and controlled delegates who will stay put a couple of days, stopping Roosevelt and allowing time and opportunity for deals which will put over someone else.

But present tabulations of that combination's probable strength include about 150 delegates for the favorite sons of such states as Texas, Arkansas, Tennessee, Kentucky, North Carolina and Louisiana. And, somehow, one can't quite imagine all those delegates staying hitched while northern wets such as Smith, Chairman Raskob, Frank Hague of New Jersey and Mayor Cermak of Chicago encompass the defeat of the candidate who has been attracting majority support through the dry south and the west.

Bitterness against Roosevelt seems deep in spots, but it isn't so widespread now as to promise that a third of the delegates can be persuaded to fight him to the death and threaten repetition of the terrible Smith-McAdoo battle of 1924. Not even if a candidate builds up to a point where he may be regarded as a real competitor.

There's the chance that Roosevelt may weaken in the meantime, but it's no better than the chance that he will gain strength. The primaries will test his popularity with the Democratic voters outside New York.

Perhaps the leaders have a deeper plot in mind than the favorite son gag. If so, they're keeping it dark. Any thought that they are helpless in the face of the present Roosevelt strength is somewhat qualified by the fact that they include a majority of the castiest, most experienced and usually most powerful of the party veterans.

Car 35 Years Old Given Job In Talking Picture

BY JESSIE HENDERSON
Copyright, 1932, By Cons. Press
Hollywood—(CPA)—Andy Clyde, the star out at the Mack-Sennett lot, has just learned to drive a car. Oh, the Scotch comedian can drive a regular car alright but he had to learn all over again for this one. It's 35 years old and for the past eight years has been at the bottom of Cripple Creek in Murfreesboro, Tenn.

They wanted a rather antique car for a comedy about the gay nineties. While they were in search of the proper vehicle Frank Wright landed in Hollywood from his home in Tennessee. Wright had made the trip in a car of 1897 vintage when a scout from the Sennett lot saw him the scout practically did a nip-up with delight.

"Stucks, this car goes grand," Wright explained today after the car had gone grand and otherwise for more than a week on the picture lot. Among the grandest things about it is that after its owner's contraption the ancient horseless taught Andy Clyde how to drive the wagon brought its owner $25 a day for eight days.

"Why I wouldn't trade Minniehaha—that's what I call her—for the sweetest new buggy ever built," continued Wright. "Me and Minniehaha have got awful well acquainted and we get along together time. In 1900 my dad traded $10 worth of millet for that car, the owner not knowing how to drive very well and being scared of her. Dad's a millwright at Murfreesboro so he parked his car on the bank of Cripple creek right beside the mill.

"Well, sir, after dad had used the car a lot of seasons, the dang creek overflowed and washed that car clear down to the bottom and there she stayed for eight years. One day I wanted some gears for another car so I hauled Minniehaha out of the creek. But her gears didn't fit the other car so I slammed her back into her and poured coal oil all over her and darned it. She didn't run fine. Well, the neighbors kidded me and kidded me because Minniehaha isn't shaped like cars today.

so I told 'em I'd show 'em how far Minnie could run and I took and drove to California. Soon as I reach Hollywood, they grab Minnie for a picture. I reckon the old gal never thought of that when she was in the mud of the creek bottom. I know I didn't.

"In about 10 days, soon's we're through with the talking, me and Minnie are starting for New York City. Yes, sir, the old gal can do around 22 miles an hour when she's feeling good. She's wore out three sets of tires since I yanked her out of the creek and she's still as spry as the day she was born."

But William Jedediah Buell the eighth—no fooling—an official on the Sennett lot, don't want Minnie to go to New York. William Jedediah has recently been appointed honorary battalion chief in the Los Angeles fire department. He wants to paint Minnie red and go to fires with her. "Nope," Frank Wright said to this idea. "Minnie's frisky enough now. Give her a red coat and they'd be no holding her. Me and Minnie are going to New York before she goes Hollywood and gets a temperamental."

More than 10,000 dwellings have been built in Amsterdam, Holland since January 1.

ADVERTISING VIA RADIO IS BEING PROBED

Commission Sends Questionnaire to Broadcasters Throughout U. S.

BY ROBERT MACK

(Copyright, 1932, by Cons. Press)
Washington—(CPA)—The mammoth task of diagnosing broadcasting's advertising ills was begun today by the federal radio commission with the dispatching of questionnaires to the 610 broadcasting stations of the country.

Losing no time in complying with the Coughens-Dill resolution adopted by the senate last week, the commission plans to comb the broadcasting industry for the information requested as speedily as possible. At best, it is estimated that six weeks or two months will elapse before the task is completed. The resolution sensed a growing dissatisfaction with the present use of broadcasting for commercial advertising and instructed the commission to ascertain the feasibility of government operation, with no commercial advertising, or of maintenance of the present system with an amelioration of the alleged "advertising evil."

Prepounding 19 general questions, and more than two dozen subquestions, the questionnaire seeks information from each station covering a typical broadcasting week. The week of Nov. 8 to 14, inclusive, was selected. Broadcasters are asked to break down into the several categories the number of hours devoted to commercial and sustaining programs during the particular period of the day, the time devoted to educational programs, the manner in which they have been presented and similar data.

Accurate Answers
On advertising, the commission specifies that the answers must be "very accurate" because the questions are "extremely important." Specifically the commission asks how many hours were devoted during the "typical week" to sales talks or a description of the commodity advertised, the terms of contracts, etc., during specially designated periods and whether the program was a chain or local program. It also asks how many hours during the week were used to advertise the business of the licensee or any principal officer or a stockholder of the station.

Broadcasters are required, under oath, to produce their balance sheets for the year ended Dec. 31, 1931, giving authorized capital, actual invested capital, gross receipts, gross expenditures, broke a down into the various classes, net profit or loss, including depreciation, and value of physical equipment and goodwill.

They must specify, also how much money they earned by broadcasting chain programs during the typical week, how much they paid the networks for chain programs of the sustaining type, and how many hours were devoted to the broadcasting of mechanical reproductions of any character during the typical week.

The commission will analyze the information so as to answer the 15 specific questions raised in the Coughens-Dill resolution. It will determine at that time what supplemental information is necessary and in the meantime, will endeavor to make a comprehensive study of other phases of the problem. Whether open hearings will be held on the subject has not yet been decided.

CHEST SORENESS YIELDS...

Pets Have Influence On Child

BY ANGELO PATRI

Most children love animals. Love in this instance means an enthusiastic interest in the active little creatures who become pets. It is not a wise adult love that brings wisdom with it. It is the childish selfish love that demands possession.

We have to start a child's education at his level, not the one we hope he will arrive at, but his own present level. When we give a child a pet we must take that level of growth into consideration. If the child is so young that his affection or liking is expressed in strangling clutches it is too soon to give him a kitten or a puppy. His affectionate administrations would kill the pet. Give him a woolly toy pet and teach him how to care for it before he gets a living creature in his power.

When a little child pokes his fingers into a dog's eyes he doesn't intend cruelty. He doesn't understand what he is doing. When he pulls the cat's tail he is, in thought, doing no more than taking hold of a convenient handle. But the cat and the dog have been outraged and they are likely to defend themselves. This means trouble for the child and for the pets. Wait until the child understands about kindness to animals and then trust him with pet pals. The owner ought to have full responsibility for a pet. This is a big job. It is a course in diet, nutrition, general health, daily routine, that offers considerable education. A valuable sort, it is too. When a child has to consult his diet list, measure food, serve it, for his pet, he acquires information and discipline well worth while. When he looks to the cleanliness of his pet's quarters, exercises him, bathes and brushes him, plays with him, he forms an affectionate attachment that his fine spiritual values. The care and thought that a child gives his pet is sure to be reflected in his attitude toward all people, all creatures that he meets.

The responsibility that a child feels for his charge is very steady to the child's character. When he races home to feed his dog instead of stopping to have a game with the boys he is developing a quality that is well worth while. We need boys and girls who are faithful to their tasks. We need a youth trained to serve first and himself afterward. If pets do this for our children they earn more than their keep.

Children like to have their pets with them at night. Why not? If Buster is clean, and certainly his master or mistress will see to that, why can't he stay in the room at night? He gives the children a feeling of safety. The familiar friend is standing by. Unless you have owned a dog you won't understand the affectionate yearning a child has for the companionship of his dog friend. A well trained dog or cat often comforts the child who has to go to bed so early that he feels alone in the household.

Pets are fine influences in the lives of children if the children are old enough to carry responsibility for their care. They don't mean much to anyone but the person who feeds and tends them, remember. If you attend to the pet he is a child, even if he is given to the child. Teach the owner to care for his charge and he will soon learn that it is a labor of love richly rewarded.

Mr. Patri will give personal attention to inquiries from parents and school teachers on the care and development of children. Write him in care of this paper, inclosing stamp, addressed envelope for reply.

Your Birthday

WHAT TOMORROW MEANS TO YOU

By MARY BLAKE "AQUARIUS"

If January 22nd is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 7:10 a. m. to 9 a. m., from 1 p. m. to 2 35 p. m. and from 8 p. m. to 9 30 p. m. The danger periods are from 10 a. m. to 11 15 a. m. and from 4 p. m. to 6 p. m.

Astrological influences on January 22nd will affect the personal side of your life more than the business aspect. Engaged couples should take courage in their hands and marry. Recent difficulties within the home will be eased through wise compromises. Increased expenditures and normal or decreased incomes.

The child born on this January 22nd will have a thoughtful nature and some inclination to despondency. It will not be expensive with its feelings and there will be a tendency to retire inward more than is good for the character.

Born January 22nd, you are by nature indolent, and will never attempt to put more labour into your efforts than is necessary for their execution. The art of doing nothing is something you do unblushingly, peaceably and of a set purpose. You are given to fitful lapses into activity, when you reveal the great possibilities within you, which, if pushed with more energy and backed by more ambition, could easily put your name on the map. You are somewhat the victim of the danger-

BRIDGE END PLAYS ARE ILLUSTRATED IN EXPERTS' SERIES

Often Mean Difference Between Winning and Losing Contract

BY TOM O'NEIL

New York—(AP)—Whatever the recent Culbertson—Lenz contract bridge match demonstrated about methods of bidding, it did show that skillful playing of the cards is essential to any system. The expert counts on taking all the tricks possible. For that reason he often rushes in where the tyro would fear to tread.

With many contracts the play is simple and the bidding is the thing. With others the expert has to make use of deductions from bids, leads and the like to take essential tricks on the twelfth and thirteenth tricks of the hand.

The necessity of intimate knowledge of end plays for successful contract was proved in the great match. End plays force an opponent to lead a certain suit. Except as a last resort or unless a certain card is marked by bidding or otherwise as being in a certain hand, the expert does not finesse, particularly when to do so would endanger a contract. He utilizes more certain methods.

Here is a typical end play:

North		East
S—4	3	S—10	9 8 6 2
H—J	9 6 3	H—K	5 2
D—Q	J 9 8 2	D—None
C—8	6	C—J	5 4 3 2
West		South
S—K	J 5	S—A	Q 7
H—10	8 4	H—A	Q 7
D—K	10 7 3	D—A	6 5 4
C—K	10 9	C—A	Q 7

The contract was three no trump with south playing. West led the troy of diamonds, south winning with the eight in dummy. He finessed the queen of hearts, then led the ace and a small heart, east winning with the king. East led a spade. South played the queen, west the king. West returned the knave. South refused to win. West led his last spade and south took the trick with the ace. He then led a small diamond, west properly refusing to win. South took the trick in dummy, cashed the thirteenth heart and led up to the ace of diamonds. On the eleventh trick a diamond was led which west had to take. Then he could do nothing but lead away from his king of clubs up to south's ace-queen.

End plays of this sort involved elimination of certain suits so that the lead up to a tenace is compulsory.

THE STORY OF SUE

By Margery Hale

"YOU'RE the man we want. I think, Pritchard," the federal agent said. "We're going out to Becker's and check up on car locations and the rest with the gardener. But first we want your fingerprints. You probably opened the back of the car. You said that you haven't driven it today, didn't you Thornton? And you didn't have any occasion to do anything about the back of it, did you, Foster? Or Mrs. Thornton?"

They shook their heads.

"Very well. I've been getting the prints now. We'll let you make some impressions upstairs in the Bertillon department, then the party will get under way."

A few minutes passed. No one said very much. Pritchard, realizing that it would be futile to revolt, had yielded with sullen grace.

"We can't go out to Harry's," Sue told Jack, speaking in a low voice.

"Corrinne said we should not come back."

"I know," Jack nodded. "But it isn't a social call. I almost have to see this thing through. If Pritchard isn't gullible, he's getting plenty and I want to be on hand to apologize. And if he is . . . well he's a cur either way. I think, but . . ."

"We won't be going inside, anyway," Sue said. "It will be all right. I'll come along."

"I thought you would," Jack smiled down at her and turned as voices came down the stairway.

"Identical prints," someone was saying. "You had the car, old man. Now spill the lowdown. For whom were you peddling?"

"I did not take the car. I don't know a thing about it," Thornton was hoarse, a little savage. "I had some private business—you ought to be satisfied with that. I mean you will be satisfied with that. These things that you think you have found don't mean a thing to you unless you can prove what the deal was that was on. And you can't. There wasn't one. Circumstantial evidence."

"Go ahead. Get it off of your chest. You'll feel better when you've said your little piece," a good humored voice that belonged to a plain clothesman said. "It's a shame the way the innocent have to suffer. Just too bad. Got anything more you want to tell us?"

"That's enough," Pritchard was tense, like an animal that wanted to spring. Waited for a chance to spring, perhaps.

"You're never at this sort of thing. I'm pretty sure of that. You haven't the steady nerves it takes. You're too scared. You aren't a clever liar. I'm afraid you aren't talented enough for the game. You had better keep to an honest trade. Well, we have to get going. Just in case you might not understand that we want to keep together on this little jaunt, I'm applying these." The official picked up the handcuffs and snapped Pritchard's wrist to his own.

"It's wisest to use the bracelets."

Sally had been standing in one position, her eyes first flattered, then scornful. Sue could see that she was suffering from an intense humiliation because the man whom she had thought a gay, bold cavalier had turned out to be a law breaker and a weakling. He was being humiliated and he couldn't reply. Sally was through.

"He won't get away. His knees are wobbling now. He's scared," she said coolly.

"But I tell you I didn't have one drop of bootleg liquor or anything else harmful in that car last night," Pritchard said suddenly. "I had the car. I'll admit that. But I got copped. An I'll tell on the fools and show up their dirty game if you'll take these bands off."

NEXT: Pritchard talks.

ciety because you're bored a good deal?

What you've got to do is to make friends and keep them. Only through a circle of friends can you meet the sort of feminine society you're aiming at. Let me hear from you again with more details about the people you know.

Start Now for Independence

Heart sick: There isn't any single move you can make to bring your husband to his senses. He's thoroughly selfish and unkind and you can't change a nature of that sort overnight. If you go to see his lady friend, you may indeed scare her off. But that would give you only temporary peace, as he might very well find someone else to take her place before long.

For the boy's sake, you must stick it out, but I should advise you to find some sort of work—any sort possible—outside the home to start you on the way to financial independence. There's a long hard road ahead of you before you'll achieve the peace and happiness you deserve. But believe me you must take your life into your own hands and work to make the best you can out of it. Your husband isn't going to help you.

You've got to stop thinking of him as a possible source of happiness and harden yourself to the realization that he will cause you only pain, if you allow him to. You're tied to him for the present. You must give your child a fair start in life. But in the meantime try to get hold of some work which will some day provide a means of escape for you.

Fruit cakes improve with age if they are stored in an air tight place. They should not be covered with frosting, as the frosting will harden and become stale before the cake has really "ripened."

If you get a piece knocked off of your walnut furniture, touch it up with iodine on a piece of cotton, then go over with furniture polish and the place will hardly show.

Before heating milk in a pan rinse the pan with water and it will not scorch so easily.

CONSTANT CARE IS SECRET OF LOVELY SKIN

BY ALICIA HART

The really beautiful skin is the one that has all enough—whether natural or applied to keep it from wrinkling and to give it that soft, bloom-on-the-peach look.

A skin that is overly oily can't achieve this. Therefore if you have too oily a skin, begin this year by taking excellent care of it. It will respond.

In spite of the age-old moot question to wash your face in water or not, use water and a good soap, a fine castile or high priced vegetable oil soap.

Too oily a skin may get blackheads if you don't keep the pores cleaned out and closed as much as astringents can close them.

Use a good staunch wash rag, tepid water and soap suds and scrub your face. Don't make the mistake of thinking you are scrubbing the floor because you may break some of the fine little blood vessels just under the surface of the skin. But do wash your face thoroughly, carefully, especially around the nose and across the chin, where oily pores do their worst.

If you haven't soft water in your part of the country, boil up a quart of a pound of bran to a quart of water and keep it boiling easily for half an hour. Strain and keep in a cool place and use enough of this to soften the water you use on your face.

CULBERTSON ON CONTRACT

by Ely Culbertson

World's Champion Player and Greatest Card Analyst

DOUBLING INSURANCE

It is an established principle of sound Contract play, when considering the question of a Penalty Double that the Doubler number among his tricks at least 1 sure trump trick. If the doubled contract is a suit bid. This safety measure assures the Doubler that he will be in the lead to take his established tricks before the Declarer has discarded losers in his own hand or Dummy on established cards in the other.

Violation of this principle, coupled with lack of imagination in the play, brought disastrous results to several players in Duplicate at the Deschanelles Club in New York recently, as the hand below discloses.

TACTLESS IN-LAWS — FINDING A WIFE—WIFE MUST WORK FOR INDEPENDENCE

CHARLOTTE B.: It's annoying to have your brother-in-law, deliberately cutting you at dances, but honestly it isn't worth fussing about. Never mind why they don't like to dance with you. There may be a hundred foolish reasons for it. They may think of you as less interesting than the other girls because you're happily married. They may have some vague idea that you belong to their brother, and that, consequently, it's not their place to ask you to dance although this certainly shows a lack of good breeding. But whatever the cause, you have so much to be thankful for that you ought to try to put this problem out of your mind.

When you think of what hundreds of girls have to stand from in-laws, you must send up a prayer of thanksgiving for the few difficulties you've had. If your in-laws ignore you in this rather tactless way, just be grateful for the peace and happiness you and your husband experience together without any interference.

Try to get over being sensitive about what is merely an indication of carelessness and bad manners on the part of your husband's brothers. You mustn't let this trivial affair upset your relationship with your husband.

E. G.: You say frankly that you probably aren't going to take any advice at all, so we start on rather a difficult basis. Also your letter clearly indicates that the last thing in the world you intend to do is to set about finding a wife for yourself. You expect to sit around until something miraculous happens, don't you?

If you really want to avoid the lonely old age, you've been dreaming for some time, you'll have to make a definite effort to find a female society. Which brings us to a question. Haven't you any new friends. It's true you live by yourself, but surely you have made some friends, during all these years? Or have you cut yourself off from so-

—WHY, JANE — OF COURSE SCRUBBING RUINS CLOTHES! BUT NOBODY SCRUBS ANY MORE — GET YOURSELF SOME RINSO. IT SOAKS CLOTHES WHITE AS SNOW

I'VE HEARD A LOT ABOUT THAT HARD-WATER SOAP, RINSO. I MUST TRY IT NEXT WASHDAY

Try this safe, hard-water soap for whiter washes — brighter colors

JUST imagine clothes getting white and clean without scrubbing them threadbare on a washboard. Imagine washable colored things soaking bright and fresh without danger of the colors running.

No wonder millions of women have given up old-fashioned washday "no-work" soap—Rinso.

Clothes soak so clean in Rinso, scrubbing is unnecessary. It's the suds that do it—thick, creamy, lasting. Twice as much suds, cup for cup, as lightweight, puffed-up soaps—even in hardest water. The makers of 40 famous washers recommend Rinso. Great for dishwashing, too. Grease goes—dishes shine. Get the BIG package.

ASSAULT CHARGE BRINGS $50 FINE

Arthur Kunstman, Menasha, Admits Guilt and Asks for Leniency

Neenah—Pleading guilty of assault and battery and not guilty of assault with intent to do great bodily harm and resisting an officer, Arthur Kunstman, Menasha, asked Municipal Judge Spengler for leniency Wednesday after Assistant Attorney Patri had moved for nolle of the other counts in the information. The attorney said the chief reason the state wished to withdraw the more serious charge was because it appeared Kunstman was intoxicated at the time he fought with George Resch, police officer, and did not know exactly what he was doing.

The court assessed a fine of $50 and costs or 40 days in jail, after hearing all statements. The judge asserted he had been informed the defendant had been previously in trouble, reminded Kunstman he put himself in the position which resulted in the trouble, and declared he should have sufficient punishment to act as a deterrent. The case is one from Menasha justice court.

According to the record, the defendant's wife called police when she had trouble with her husband, and a fight ensued when policemen came. Kunstman received two fractured ribs in the melee. It also appeared he had lost his job since the day of his arrest, Dec. 10, and at the present time is without money to pay his fine.

KRUEGER SPECIALS HOLD DARTBALL LEAD

Neenah—Krueger Specials are still in the lead in the Eagle dartball league following the weekly matches played Wednesday evening at the clubroom diamond. Pickett Specials took a drop from fourth place to the cellar position by losing three straight games to the Milwaukee Journalists.

POSTPONE HEARING IN BURGLARY CASE

Neenah—Hearing in the case against Peter J. Ladd, pioneer manufacturer, charged with burglary at the Mueller Dairy company plant in W. Menasha, which was to have been held Thursday morning in Municipal court, again was postponed for one month. The date for hearing has been postponed several times. Mr. Ladd was arrested after he had been found inside the dairy at night with several pounds of butter on his person.

ADDRESSES OFFICERS

Neenah—Major Frank U. McCoskie, regular army officer unit instructor, stationed at Fond du Lac, spoke Wednesday evening at the Neenah-Menasha Reserve Officers club meeting at Menasha Memorial building. Major McCoskie recently returned from duty in China, where he spent several years. "China, China" was the subject of his talk. The meeting was attended by about 30 members.

FINISH INSTALLING AUTOMATIC SIGNALS

Neenah—Installation of automatic stop-and-go lights at Gillingham's corners, both west of Neenah, has been completed.

Highways 26 and 41 branch off at Gillingham's corners, the former going straight ahead and the latter turning right. Stewart's corners is the intersection of Highways 26 and 150, north of Gillingham's corners. Both corners have been scenes of several bad accidents in spite of the four-way arterial signs which were supposed to warn traffic of dangerous corners. The new automatic signal is fool-proof and works by means of pads in the roads in all four directions which regulate the lights.

SECOND SEMESTER STARTS ON JAN. 25

Number of New Courses to Be Offered at Neenah Senior High School

Neenah—The second semester at the senior high school will begin next Monday. Semester examinations are being given this week. There will be no semester vacation.

Several new courses will be offered next semester, including solid geometry, vocational civics, seamanship and advertising. A change in the freshmen English department will be made. Students who took English I the first semester will take oral English I the second semester, and those just completing a semester of oral English I will take English I.

The enrollment at the new high school is 607 pupils, according to Principal Holzman. This year's enrollment is the largest Neenah high school has ever had showing a 20 per cent increase over last year.

The freshmen class is the largest, having 108 members. The sophomores are next with 162. There are 125 juniors and 119 seniors. All the classes are considerably larger than last year.

There is a marked tendency for students who have dropped school some time or other, to resume their studies this year, according to Mr. Holzman.

One student reentered after being out for five years. Another girl returned to high school after an illness which kept her out of school for three years. She will graduate next spring. One boy reentered after becoming an aviator. After being in the profession for some time he decided to reenter high school and finish the course. He will graduate in two years. Sickens kept another boy out for some time and he has registered to resume his studies at the second semester.

Young folks who are at present not employed and wish to go to high school or reenter and complete their education are urged to do so at the second semester, according to Mr. Holzman.

CONTINUE BASKETBALL TOURNEY AT SCHOOL

Neenah—The basketball tournament at the high school, under direction of Coach Ole Jorgensen, is progressing with games each noon and afternoon at the gymnasium. The games are hotly contested, as each team is endeavoring to hold up the reputation of the city it represents. The tournament is divided into two sections, the minor and major leagues. The former contains freshmen and sophomores, the latter contains juniors and seniors.

Oconto Falls is leading in the minor division, while Sturgeon Bay and Neenawau are tied for first place in the majors.

SETTLE TWO ACTIONS IN MUNICIPAL COURT

Neenah—Settlement in open court of two actions to have been tried by Municipal Judge Beglinger on Tuesday eliminated necessity of submitting the cases to a jury a second time.

The cases were those of John Stommel versus James Antonson, and Walter Stommel, by guardian against Antonson. Both actions were settled by payment of $1,000 to the plaintiffs.

The cases arose from an automobile accident Sept. 13, 1930, at the Wisconsin avenue to River side park. John Stommel sought damages for his car, and his son, Walter Stommel, the driver, for personal injuries.

SEEK PATIENT WHO FLED FROM HOSPITAL

Neenah—The police department is assisting authorities at the Northern Hospital for Insane in a search for Ignatz Keinski, patient who escaped last Tuesday afternoon from the institution. The missing man is described as 44 years of age, weighing 135 pounds, and is 5 feet 11 inches in height. He has black hair, a dark mustache, brown eyes, and wore a red sweater, blue overalls and corduroy cap.

PLAN JOINT MEETING

Neenah—A joint meeting of Neenah and Menasha Kiwanis club will be held on the evening of Feb. 2 at Hotel Menasha. Wives of members will attend and dancing and cards will be the entertainment feature.

CRIME INCREASES IS REVEALED IN REPORT OF COURT

192 Persons Arraigned in Municipal Court During Year

Neenah—Increase in crime during 1931 over 1930 is revealed in the annual report to the state board of control by Pat Howlett, clerk of the municipal court, which has original jurisdiction of all criminal cases in Winnebago-co.

A total of 192 persons were arraigned before Judge Spengler during the last year for alleged felonies as compared to only 150 for the previous year.

The increase in the number of non-support actions was particularly noticeable, 81, compared to 50 last year. Larceny cases jumped to 38 from 23, and offenses involving morals increased from 24 to 37.

Misdemeanors included in the report comprise only state cases and not ordinance cases, brought under city laws drawn in conformity with the statutes. The record of these lesser offenses showed 28 drunken drivers in court in each of the two years, fewer arrests for drunkenness, 45 as compared to 53, but more vagrancy cases, 23 last year and 14 the previous 12 months.

Another interesting feature of the report was the increased number of convicted persons placed on probation or otherwise disposed of, and the decrease in the number sentenced to a state criminal institution.

While 30 were sent to prison or reformatory in 1930, only 21 were sentenced in 1931. 26 were placed on probation in 1930 and 34 in 1931. During the last year, 15 of the cases were disposed of in some other manner than by prison sentence or probation to the state board of control, while the year before there were only three such instances.

A total of 39 cases still were pending at the end of the last year, while the previous year, there were 30 pending actions.

Nine of those in court for criminal offenses were given county jail terms, and the year before, six.

Of the total number of persons placed under arrest, 80 were convicted of the offenses with which they were charged, but only three were convicted on jury trial and three by trial before the court. The rest pleaded guilty. During 1930, convictions numbered only 67.

Last year, however, no defendant was freed by a jury and only one by the court. Of the remainder of the defendants, 76 were released following dismissal of state motion, or their cases were transferred to other courts.

One sign of the times was the number of persons committed to jail for misdemeanors during the year for non-payment of fines. Such cases numbered 44 during 1931 as compared to 21 in 1930.

'MORTGAGE ON BRAIN' ENDED BY JUDGE IN MILWAUKEE COURT

Milwaukee—(P)—John G. Schmidt a 70-year-old chemist, today was free of what Judge Charles L. Aarons termed a "mortgage on the brain."

Judge Aarons yesterday released Schmidt from an agreement with G. Walter Esau, declaring Esau apparently was trying to monopolize the chemist's knowledge in such a way that he would have to work for Esau or not at all.

Esau's suit involved an agreement made with Schmidt, June 27, 1929, by which Schmidt was to manufacture a chemical compound to stop acid from attacking steel, which product was to be superior to any other of its kind on the market.

After marketing the compound for a while, Esau quit paying Schmidt his $300 a month salary in September, 1930, claiming the compound was not superior to others. Schmidt went back to work for former employers and Esau sued to enforce the agreement.

Judge Aarons held the agreement imposed "a servitude upon the defendant that might lead to tragic consequences if it could be specifically enforced."

SONNENBERGS BEAT NEW LONDON QUINT

36 to 30 Victory Gives Menasha Team Second Place in League

Menasha—Clarence "Monk" Vetter, former Menasha high school star, led the Sonnenberg Drugs to a 36 to 30 victory over New London and second place in the Badger state league standings at St. Mary's gymnasium Wednesday evening. Vetter, working at forward, scored seven baskets and five free throws for a total of 16 points.

Wednesday's game was the third conference battle for the Sonnenberg aggregation, now credited with two wins and one loss. A clash with the league leading St. Joe five at Oshkosh is scheduled for Tuesday evening.

Although the New London team rallied on several occasions to reduce the Menasha lead, the Sonnenberg offensive showed marked superiority throughout Wednesday's game. The lineup included Godhardt at center, Keefe and Vetter at forwards, Ammus and Hoshel at guards.

The victory was the second in two days for the Sonnenberg squad, which defeated the Kaukauna Chevrons in a curtain raiser for the St. Mary-St. Norbert high school clash here Tuesday evening. In a preliminary game here Wednesday the Menasha Falcons defeated the Menasha All Stars, 8 to 6.

Leo Champeau, Herbie Thompson Top Amateur Card Tonight

NEW LONDON AND GREEN BAY BOYS MEET IN WINDUP

Hank Rasmussen, Art West Settle 135 Pound Championship Question

THE CARDS
Leo Champeau, Green Bay vs. Herbie Thompson, New London.
Art West, Appleton vs. Hank Rasmussen, Appleton.
Art Van Ess, Green Bay vs. Claude Sackett, New London.
Ted Lang, Fond du Lac vs. Hanky Hartman, Oshkosh.
Nibs Knox, Kaukauna vs. Ken Albers, Fond du Lac.
Babe Murphy, Appleton vs. Ade Quaintance, New London.

A snifty fight card as ever was held for edification of Appleton amateur fight fans will be staged tonight at Armory G under auspices of Oney Johnston post of the American legion. The first bout will go on the boards at 8:30 and the legionaries promise the fans they will be home in time to hear Amos and Andy from their favorite radio station.

The windup on tonight's card will show Leo Champeau of Green Bay and Herbie Thompson of New London, both fighters of the type that put the fans on the edge of their chairs seeking the fellow next to them because he isn't thinking their way.

Leo and Herbie have fought several times in the course of their amateur days and Herbie holds the most decisions, most of them K. O.'s. Their first meeting was the equivalent to any of Jack Dempsey's most sensational fights, even the one where he was knocked out of the ring by Flippo. Herbie Thompson emulated Jack when the two boys clashed here the first time only Herbie was kind enough to fall on the feet of the paying customers instead of the press.

Herbie Won First Bout
And like Jack, Herbie got back into the ring and socked Leo in the bread basket a couple of times and brought an end to the show. Since then the boys have fought here and there with Leo going great guns until Herbie's body blows were him down.

So during the last couple weeks Leo has been taking himself to the scene of a Green Bay engineering company where he has been letting a pile driver strengthen up his stomach muscles. (Believe it or not) And just Wednesday night Champeau announced he can stand wallops around the body with anything that Herbie's fists to Shorty Robinson's cool about.

The semi windup will be for the honor of ye old home town in the 135 pound class and will show Art West and Hank Rasmussen West has been coming along fast as a boxer and fighter and gets his big chance locally when he steps in against Rasmussen. Should he beat Razz he'll be ready to take on a lot of first class performers hereabouts.

Rasmussen will have the benefit of a lot of experience and a couple mean hands when he climbs into the ring. West, rugged and perfectly trained, will have real boxing skill and a couple chunks of dynamite in either glove. Everyone knows West's ability to use his right hand and in his last bout he showed a rapier like left that carries the kick of a model T truck.

And while the semi and windup promise to be sensational, the bout between Art Van Ess of Green Bay and Claude Sackett of New London, may steal the whole performance. Van Ess is well known as a slugging fool who can knock any opponent into the middle of Manchuria.

Sackett also totes a couple pounds of T. N. T. and if either lands solidly something will just have to give. Sackett claims he has won every fight but one in the last couple years.

The third bout of the evening probably will show Ted Lang, Fond du Lac, and Hanky Hartman, Oshkosh, the former replacing Bobby Brown on the card.

In the second bout Nibs Knox, a new contender for the flistic laurels around Kaukauna is booked to meet Ken Albers, Fond du Lac. Both are reputed to be heavy hitters and capable of putting on a great performance.

The curtain raiser will see Babe Murphy from over in the Fourth ward trading leather with a chap possessed of a name that is a name—Ade Quaintance of New London. Both are youngsters just getting started in the racket and they'll try their doggonedest to please.

Although no definite announcement has been made Walter Houle, veteran Milwaukee referee, should be the third man in the ring. It's almost Walter's turn to show here and that of course will please everyone.

Tickets for the bout have been going fairly well, it is said, but there are plenty of choice main floor seats available.

Sister Manages Latest Sensation In Heavy Ranks

CHICAGO—(P)—"Leaping Lena" is swinging into action. In a small office, hazy with smoke, the only woman prize fight manager in the country electrified the atmosphere with orders as her camp made ready today to leave for New York where her brother, King Levinsky, will fight Max Baer, Jan. 29.

"Brrrr—" jangled the telephone. Mrs. Lena Levy, christened "Leaping Lena" by her ring associates, grabbed it, shouting a promoter, a trainer, several interested hangers-on out of her inner office.

"I'm expecting a long distance call from New York," she explained.

"Hello, hello. What's that? Fifteen round bout you say? No! No!," she exploded. "The King hasn't trained for 15 rounds. Wait a minute—"

HOCKEY BECOMING NEW MAJOR SPORT

Game Now Favored by Many Eastern, Middle West Colleges

New York—(P)—Although it has a long way to go before it can catch up with basketball, hockey is rapidly becoming a major winter sport in the colleges of the United States.

Formerly restricted in the United States to colleges that were located far enough north to have a good supply of natural ice or near an artificial rink, the game has spread out in the past few years along with the development of the professional game until every school where the boys can locate a place to skate is organizing a team.

Tale, Harvard, Princeton and Dartmouth still hold rank as the "big four" of the ice and northern New England remains the center of small college hockey. But in the past few years the mid-west has joined in with Minnesota, Michigan and Wisconsin heading the Big Ten parade and developing teams that can hold their own against the best in the east and against the smaller nearby colleges in Canada. Illinois, with its new rink ready, promises to have a team soon.

BADGER COUNCIL WILL NAME GRID COACH, MARCH 9

Sundt, Backfield Coach, Is Suggested by Those Favoring Alumnus

BY E. L. ALMEN
Associated Press Sports Writer
ADISON—(P)—A probability that an assistant coach will be head football mentor at the University of Wisconsin next year existed today as the result of action taken by the board of regents.

Proposals that the university look to its own alumni for coaching material have come from various quarters since the athletic department saw a need for financial retrenchment and the name of Guy Sundt has often been mentioned.

It is known that the selection of Sundt to succeed Glenn Thistlethwaite, resigned, is favored by some members of the board of regents, as well as part of the athletic council. Sundt distinguished himself as a fullback at Wisconsin for four years prior to graduation in 1923. As a freshman he played on the 1918 S. A. T. C. team and captained the 1919 squad. In 1922 and 1923 he was coach at Ripon college and has been backfield coach at Wisconsin since.

Opposing the group that desires Sundt or some other alumnus are those who feel the university needs a coach of national reputation. The state legislature indicated its favor for the latter proposal when it adopted a report submitted by the special committee which investigated the athletic department. The committee took the view that only a coach of national reputation could put Wisconsin on a par with leading teams of the Western conference.

A desire on the part of the board of regents for economies in the athletic department may be the deciding factor in the selection of the coach, however. The board took a definite step toward retrenchment when it announced that the maximum expenditure for athletics in 1933 would be $32,400 less than that of the previous year. Yesterday the board announced that a new coach will not be selected before the next meeting, March 9.

At its next meeting the board will also consider a resolution abolishing the present athletic council and creating an athletic board of seven members. The council, which has charge of athletic policy and personnel, has been subjected to much criticism by the legislature. Both the legislature and one regent have proposed changes in the council so as to limit the terms of faculty members.

Meanwhile, interest is focused on the faculty which also has taken a hand in athletic matters. A special committee on athletics this week submitted a report asking radical changes in policy affecting not only the internal problems of the athletic department, but also the relation of the university to other schools of the conference. The faculty will act on the report Feb. 8.

MIKE KELLEY SIGNS BUSH AS MILLER BOSS

Minneapolis—(P)—A greying fellow known wherever baseball men gather will watch American association play as a club president for the first time next season.

After 24 years as player and manager—chiefly the latter—M. J. (Mike) Kelley will be president of the Minneapolis association team, with Owen (Donnie) Bush directing the team.

Kelley, principal owner of the club heretofore has preferred to be active with the players. But now he is 52 and wants things a bit easier. He and Bush made known yesterday the latter had signed a one year contract as manager with the option of becoming a partner in ownership next year.

The retiring manager entered the game as a first baseman at Bridgeport, Conn., and has spent most of the years in the American association. He produced five pennant winners for St. Paul.

New Golf Ball Will Help Duffer Get More Distance

BY FRANCIS J. POWERS

CHICAGO—(CPA)—The new golf ball received its first real competitive test in the Agua Caliente open tournament, which Fred Morrison won with a score of four under fours for the 72 holes.

The Agua Caliente course puts a premium on distance, which Hillcrest where the Los Angeles open was played did not, and that's of great interest to the average golfer who wants all the yardage that can be stuffed into a golf ball.

Baseball Still Ranks As The "National Pastime"

(Note: This is one of a series of stories dealing with the results of the Associated Press poll of country-wide opinion on America's outstanding sports and their features of popular interest.)
BY ALAN GOULD
Associated Press Sports Editor
NEW YORK—(P)—One of the most striking features of the Associated Press poll of newspaper expert opinion is proof of the astonishing growth of football and golf in national popularity, testifying strongly to the advance of the amateur side of our competitive sports.

These two sports have swept the country within the past decade, most observers agree. Meanwhile, baseball has had a fight to hold its own and remain the "national pastime," by a narrow margin, and other professional sports such as boxing and horse racing have experienced sharp declines in public interest.

Baseball's lead over all other sports has so far been cut down that the Associated Press poll shows a compilation of 181 points to football's 163. Golf is a good third with 114, but boxing is a poor fourth with only 25.

Retirements Hurt
Five years ago boxing undoubtedly would have been included in the first three by 99 out of every 100 observers. Jack Dempsey, Babe Ruth's chief rival as a public idol in the boom days, was a big factor in football's popularity and his retirement, along with that of Gene Tunney, accelerated the sports decline in general interest.

If it were possible to drive out certain elements from boxing, writes a Philadelphia expert, "such as the racketeers, smart alecks who know that this bout or that bout is 'in the bag'; circus boxers as well as those guilty of throwing fights, the game would return to the same standard when record gates were drawn in the days of Kilbane, Leonard and Dempsey."

Professional wrestling, several experts find, has helped counter boxing from its former favor, the comparison in Mississippi showing "about four wrestling fans to each boxing fanatic in 1932."

The fight game however, still has many backers in its strongholds on the two seaboard, San Francisco giving it a stronger vote than New York.

While many observers now feel that golf tops all sports in the amount of player activity, it is conceded that football and baseball command greater all-around interest. This, it is pointed out, is due to the games, thereby millions of participants are involved to start with.

Baseball Leads
"Baseball still has more participants than football and it isn't so terribly far behind golf, taking into account all of the professional, semi-pro, school and kid teams, and I don't believe there is any sport to compare with it in drawing power or if all had to compete on a daily basis," asserts Texas.

To which a Philadelphia adds his belief that baseball has more participants. Still, as an Iowa supporter of golf notices: "The farm hand, the clerk and the business executive, not to mention the school kids, play the game and some of them fairly well" and adds a Nebraska, "every whistling point on the railroad has its golf course now."

General Clinkin's decision to send out ballots came after the collapse of the Mickey-Schmelzing fight, scheduled for Miami, Fla. Schmelzing's time limit to sign for a championship battle under N. B. A. rules expired Jan. 3 but grace was given during negotiations. When the Walter Schmelzing battle blew up, grace was withdrawn.

So far in the Associated Press poll, only two voting members were found to favor Schmelzing. All the others either backed General Clinkin or refused to discuss the case until they received the full details with their ballots. A majority was necessary to vacate the title.

Meanwhile, Jack Kearns, manager of Walker, headed for Chicago to claim the title for his fighter on the grounds that Schmelzing "ran out" of his proposed match with Walker at Miami. Kearns planned to appear before General Clinkin today to support his claim and to post a forfeit.

contract as manager with the option of becoming a partner in ownership next year.

The retiring manager entered the game as a first baseman at Bridgeport, Conn., and has spent most of the years in the American association. He produced five pennant winners for St. Paul.

Fred McLeod and George Sargent compare it with the old "Glory Dimple," that was quite a ball back in the days when golf was "cow pasture pool" and all golfers were regarded as socialists. It will satisfy the duffer and after all he is the gent who pays the tolls of the game.

Morrison's victory was the biggest surprise of the winter season for while the long hitting Californian has been a good golfer these many years he never displayed sufficient form to rank him above Sam A. Cooper, Mac Smith and a dozen others. At Caliente he backed up a neat short game with his tremendous shots through the fairway and left the favorites behind. Morrison's victory now puts him ahead of Willy Cox, Harry Cooper and Mac Smith as the big money winner of the winter but he scarcely will hold the margin long since he will not follow the forthcoming winter tournaments as the others intend to.

Gene Sarazen played the most consistent golf shown at Agua Caliente. After opening with a 70, Gene turned in three rounds of even par golf and only for Morrison's two sensational rounds would have won the world's richest championship for the second time. Sarazen is playing beautiful golf from tee to green and getting tremendous distances with his clubs. He is about due to win one of the winter tournaments but is more intent on keeping his game keen for the big championships of the summer. Gene has made no announcement of his plans but if he continues to play well it would not be surprising to see him in the Irish open, next spring. Sarazen never has been able to play his golf in Britain, but being of a determined nature he will keep trying.

FRIDAY'S GAMES
East Green Bay at West Green Bay.
Sheboygan at Manitowoc.
Marquette at Appleton.
Oshkosh at Fond du Lac.

APPLETON high school basketball team last night went through a long drill at the armory as the last workout at the scene of Friday night's game with Marquette here. Tonight's practice, if held, probably will be a short workout at the high school gym or at the college gym. The armory will be prepared for the fight card this evening and the cagers are just out of luck.

Three teams are tied for the lead in the valley league as the schools prepare for tomorrow night's game. And when the evening's battles are over all only two will be left on top—and maybe only one.

Beat Fondy 12-9
Teams tied for the lead are West, East and Appleton. The first two clash at the purple gymnasium tomorrow night and of course one will have to lose. Appleton will battle Marquette here and is a favorite to win, although anything can be expected of Marquette since it turned in that win over Fond du Lac last week, 12 to 9.

Other games tomorrow will show Sheboygan and Manitowoc clashing at Sheboygan in one of their merry battles. The clubs have more than valley history to goad them on and they'll probably engage in a blood and thunder argument with either team a possible winner.

Another rivalry between natural rivals will be the Oshkosh invasion of Fond du Lac. The former team appears a bit stronger than the Cards although the latter will have the edge in that they play at home.

Tomorrow night's games will be the last for many valley cagers. West Green Bay loses two of its games, Oshkosh is reported to be losing six men of the squad, and Fond du Lac and Sheboygan several more. Mid-year graduations are the reason.

Heitzky Leading Scorer
Scoring statistics of the last few days show two centers leading the league Heitzky, East Green Bay center tops the loop with 12 field goals and nine free throws for a total of 33 points. He is followed by B. Wolfe of West Green Bay with one in the field goal and nine free tosses for a total of 21 points.

Bill Peetter leads Appleton scorers with a total of 24 points and Mortell is second with 20.

LITTLE CONSIDERED FOR IOWA U. JOB

Badger Athletic Director Invited to Confer With Hawkeyes

Iowa City—(P)—Football fans discussed with interest today the visit which George Little, former Wisconsin university athletic director and head football coach, will make on the Iowa university campus Friday as a prospect for the position of head football coach of the university.

The announcement Wednesday that Little has been invited by the athletic board to come for an interview regarding Burton A. Ingwersen's former job was a surprise, since the former Wisconsin mentor had not been mentioned previously as a candidate.

Dr. E. H. Lauer, athletic director, declared Wednesday night that Little had not applied for the post but had been invited by the board because the members felt his experience and record warranted his consideration.

Little was head football coach at Miami and Michigan universities. During his two years of coaching football at Wisconsin in 1925 and 1926, his teams won six conference games, lost three and tied two.

have to say for themselves. What this National Socialist, the one of all his party in a position of public responsibility, had to say was interesting in itself, but all the more interesting by reason of the way he said it.

Most Hitlerites are supposed to wear brass knuckles. This one wore a wedding ring. Most Hitlerites are supposed to be profoundly brutal. This one looked sufficiently like the liberal and humanitarian editor of the New Republic. Mr. Bruce Bliven, to be his twin brother. The only unmistakable sign of Hitler on his broad, school-masterly face was a narrow, crooked mustache of the style Hitler affects and that is becoming among his followers as popular as were once the turned-up, fierce mustaches of Kaiser Wilhelm. The rimless spectacles of his craft—Herr Klages was a teacher of natural sciences before he took up statesmanship—were quite out of keeping with the character of National Socialists believed to be so staunchly on the qui vive for a knock-out, drag-out fight.

In the Nazi Calendar for Youth, Adolf Hitler's maxim is printed in large black letters: "A man does not beg for his rights; he fights for them."

Opposes Violence
"I believe," declared this one responsible Hitlerite, forty-one years old, "that the time for the use of violence and force in international affairs is gone. We would use force against us if we refused to pay tribute any more. I think that would depend on what attitude is taken by the outside world, but my impression is that the days of military invasion to collect money are a thing of the past."

We sat in the Cabinet room and looked out over the roofs of the 1-100-year-old city of Brunswick. Around the corner was the Brunswick County Bankward more than 1,000 years ago, near by the famous bronze lion of Brunswick, set up in 1166 by Henry the Lion and facing east to symbolize the struggle of the Teutons to dam the Slavic flood. Hitler claims to be Europe's bulwark against the Bolsheviks. Herr Klages, as Minister of Education and of the Interior, not only has control of the schools but of the police. I asked the Minister what would happen to the German Communists if Hitler came to power.

"We would suppress them," he declared. "But that does not mean there would be a regime of revenge."

I cited the query of one foreign resident of Berlin who asked if it would not be prudent to remove his family from Germany. "The query was based upon the presumption that suppression of the Communist Party by a Hitler government would mean violence, riots, perhaps civil war."

"If we come to power, as we surely will," insisted Herr Klages, "we shall only come to power legally. In power legally we shall administer the Government legally. Only illegal resistance to the Government could bring about a situation that would require the use of force."

Doubts Mass Attack
I asked the Minister what he thought the opponents of National Socialism would do if Hitler either appeared to be on the verge of obtaining power legally or had actually attained it. Would the Republicans, anti-Fascist parties attempt by force to keep Hitler from the power?

"My experience here as a Minister has taught me," he replied, "that our opponents have not the mentality to organize mass violence against a legal government by the National Socialists. It is not possible for democrats to prevent or attempt to prevent by force the operation of democracy and remain democrats. The whole ideology of the Republican opponents of the National Socialists is such that they must permit the mechanism of popular government which they themselves have constructed to work even if it results in bringing to power a party they abhor."

"Our opponents," continued the Minister, "persist in propagating the notion and especially to foreigners, that a National Socialist government would mean bloodshed and violence. It could only mean that, if the opponents of the National Socialist Government continued to continue their opposition illegally and with bloodshed and violence. They also propagate with great ardor the belief that the coming of National Socialism in Germany must mean conflict with France. This is nonsense, for there is nobody in our party, or for that matter in Germany, who harbors any ideas of aggression against France."

Outside snow fell and sifted white flurries on the carved gables of Brunswick's medieval housefronts. The city is a favorite among American and British tourists acquainted with the treasures of artistic masterpieces from its dual past. I asked Herr Klages about the National Socialist attitude toward foreigners and cited the report that one National Socialist in Berlin had declared that when Hitler took charge of the Government they would expel from Germany all Americans as well as other capital non-participating in German concerns.

Would Protect Foreigners
"Under our Government," replied the Minister, "foreigners will enjoy the full protection of the laws. Germans have much property abroad and enjoy the protection of the laws of the countries in which they have their investments. If we expect them to continue to enjoy this protection we must afford the same protection to foreigners in Germany. Aside from any other consideration it would only be to our interest to see that foreigners are properly handled."

We returned to the vital question of Franco-German relations and of the National Socialists' attitude toward payment of the reparations that France has indicated she may remit temporarily but will never allow to be repudiated in principle. I asked Herr Klages if he were of the opinion that Germany could pay reparations in the future.

"No," he declared in an even tone, "Germany can never repay reparations again. Germany never has been able to pay reparations and she never will be. The money we have paid for tribute so far has not been paid from our pockets. We had to borrow the money from abroad from private persons and use this money to pay our public so-called debts. You see what a mess this manner of payment has gotten the world into. There is no use in repeating it."

"But," I reminded him, "France may after all not agree with you that Germany will never be able to pay reparations. If she does not agree and you insist that you can't pay, then what?"

"Our inability to pay has been documented," replied the Minister. "If France were to attempt then to take forcible measures, I think we could count upon England and Italy strongly to reprehend such action."

"But 1932 is Not 1923"
"But England strongly reprehended the occupation of the Ruhr in 1923 when Germany declared she could not pay and France set out to force payment."

"Yes, but 1932 is not 1923, and there are many new factors, and I repeat that I do not think the world would stand for a new invasion of Germany. At any rate," he added, with an afterthought that perhaps had more significance than the main argument, "France would at the most only occupy a small part of Germany—and what good would that do her?"

"I wish you would emphasize," he went on, folding his hands and looking straight through his spectacles at me, "that despite all the frightful misery in Germany and the fact masses of the people are in a condition that would mean desperation for most nations, one must be astounded at the orderly, quiet way with which the Germans are standing their troubles. There have been no insurrections, no attempt to bring about a change illegally. With all our poverty and wretchedness we are resolved, as a people, to achieve our salvation only by orderly and legal means."

It must be admitted that as the National Socialist Minister sat there and in his placid way expatiated on the orderliness of the German people, the reputation and, it must be said, the record of the National Socialists for seeking to achieve their ends by violence receded behind the picture he recalled of the truly astonishing discipline of this people.

I thought of July, 1931, when all the banks in Germany closed and for weeks no depositor could withdraw more than a fraction either of his deposits or even of enough money to supply his daily needs. The day before the banks were to be reopened, an American banker had prophesied to me that the next day there would be a frightful run on all the banks, that the people would demand their money in such quantities that the entire banking system of Germany would break down. But the day of reopening the people of Germany paid more money into their banks than they withdrew.

Germany's Record Reassuring
I thought of the last convulsive days of the inflation in 1923 when the German currency plunged to cosmic depths and a dollar was worth three trillion paper marks. Not only did nothing happen, no revolution and no serious attempt at it, but the moment the mark was stabilized at four trillion two hundred billion to the dollar, the German people immediately set about saving again and by 1927 had put away a billion dollars in a currency that just four years before had tumbled to waste paper as it lay in their savings banks.

The countless critical but bloodless days that Germany has endured since the end of the war brought the shock of unexpected defeat to its people; the scores of times when even such observers as the foreign diplomats in Berlin anticipated violent upheavals that never happened; the notation in Lord D'Almon's diary that he never quite found the courage to bring his art treasures to Berlin for fear of the mobs that never disturbed the peace of his embassy during his entire four years in the German capital. All these recollections came to mind at the grave insistence of the National Socialist Minister that the Germans are an orderly people. It was reassuring.

The Minister laughed as I told him that we had come in search of a Nazi without a knife. But the memory persisted of a large kitchen knife stained with blood, taken from the drawer of a leader of a Republican organization, and flourished under my nose with the remark, "We took that from a Nazi bravo."

I asked the Minister what was the activity of the Reds in Brunswick. He replied that the Communists had attempted to organize food looting in the city but had found no popular sympathy.

This morning a crowd had gathered outside our hotel window. The people were staring upward at the tiny figure of a man clambering on the roof of the tower of the ancient Dom, the Brunswick Cathedral built by Henry the Lion in 1176. The man was so high and so far away he looked like a doll. He strained and reached and finally plucked down a little piece of cloth from the weather vane of the tower. The cloth was very far away but one could see it was red. In the snowy winter night a Communist had climbed the steeple and put up the red flag, a protest against unemployment.

I asked the Minister what a Hitler government would do to solve the unemployment problem, would the dolts be abolished?

"That," he declared, "would be impossible. In Germany that could not be done immediately. Our solution would be otherwise."

But the Minister would not discuss what the Nazi solution would be. He insisted that if the National Socialists were to announce their plans for alleviating the economic crisis they would spoil the chances of success. "Our solution depends upon confidence," he declared, "and it also depends upon an element of surprise. The solution will be all the more effective the less there is known about it in advance."

This was a familiar answer. Another representative of the party had put it a little more bluntly by saying that "if we give away our method of getting out of the economic crisis our enemies will take it up and use it and take credit for it."

This curious characteristic of the National Socialists has led some unkind critics to insinuate that the Nazis have no solution. Minister Klages merely excused himself from discussing a tactical secret.

Expects Absolute Majority
The renowned but unannounced solution of the economic crisis, of course, could not be applied until the National Socialists came to power alone. Minister Klages emphasized that his own regime in Brunswick was hampered by the dependence of a German state upon the Reich Government. "My party," he declared, "has not expected that I should be able to administer my office in entire accordance with National Socialist policies. That is impossible so long as we do not have a National Socialist Government in the Reich."

"Would it not also be true," I asked, "that if the National Socialists enter a coalition Government in the Reich, say with the Center party, they will not be able to carry out their policies any more effectively than you have been able to in Brunswick?"

"That would be true, perhaps, only at first," he replied. "Only so long as we had to put up with a coalition. But I confidently anticipate that in 1932 we shall get an absolute majority in the Reich and come to full and unrestricted power."

As a matter of fact, Minister Klages' opponents in Brunswick, whose opinions were offered me in full and without reserve, specified as his most serious offense the fact that he had carried out Chancellor Brüning's decree somewhat more radically than Chancellor Brüning's own party and coalition friends elsewhere in the Reich had carried it out. The one National Socialist Minister in office in a German state had neither defied the Reich nor broken the constitution, but had annoyed his opponents chiefly by the excessive zeal with which he had gone about reducing civil service salaries in accordance with the decree of Chancellor Brüning, whom the Nazis propose to replace.

Bloodshed Last Autumn
In the record of National Socialist administration of Brunswick that began in September, 1930, there remains to be mentioned the incident of the visit here of 100,000 Nazi Storm Troops in October, 1931. They paraded, heard orations, demonstrated, sang, listened to brass bands and in the evening clashed with the local Communist and Socialist workmen.

The next morning two workmen were dead, a score of combatants wounded and a number of smashed windows and doors in the working class quarters of the town bore witness to the traditional love of law and order of the German people. The protestations of Minister Klages about the peaceable and law-abiding character of the German were impressive, genuinely deserving of consideration. But so was the visit of the Storm Troops.

In the present Brunswick diet sit seventeen Social Democrats, two Communists, one member of the State (Democratic) Party, nine National Socialists and eleven members of the bloc of conservative bourgeois parties who today share the power in coalition with the Nazis although the coalition has only precisely 50 per cent of the diet.

Anton Franzen for the Nazis was the first Minister of the Interior and Education until he resigned in June, 1931, allegedly because his party was dissatisfied with the moderation of his rule. He was succeeded by Klages, who with one other Minister, a German Nationalist, Dr. Kuchenthal, now constitutes the whole government of Brunswick. Prophecies here today are that in a new Diet election the Nazis would increase their strength from nine to fifteen seats and have with the conservative bloc an absolute majority.

Here, as in Weimar, if one could judge the prospects for the Reich under Hitler by the record of a local state under the partial control of a Hitler man, the future would not promise a catastrophe. There are differences in the two situations that make the comparisons not entirely trustworthy, and Minister Klages himself pointed out some of these differences, but the fact is that even the Nazis' political enemies from the Republican left are astonished at the mildness of the Nazi government here. None of them dares say so in his own party press but they dare and do say so privately.

A Moderate Minister
Of all the lessons to be learned from a visit to the Brunswick National Socialist Minister the most valuable for the outside world perhaps is the fact that Hitler chose just such a man as Herr Klages to be his representative. If Hitler thereby set a precedent for himself in the Reich and filled his Cabinet in Berlin with men of equally moderate attitude the apprehensions that have been harbored for a Hitler regime might prove unwarranted.

It may be interpolated that Herr Klages was talking to a foreign correspondent and could not do so accordingly. Even so it is of considerable interest for the outside world to know that the National Socialist Minister considered it expedient to interpret the party program in a way that would be more or less reassuring to the outside world.

Our photographer, James Abbe, asked Minister Klages for permission to photograph him with his family. The Minister is a member of the German "League of Families with Many Children." The Minister reflected National Socialist thought in his, and proponent of the masterful male, he only said "I have to ask my wife."

He telephoned "But, my dear," he insisted with a laugh, "in America they think National Socialists eat children. We can show them five that haven't been eaten yet."

The visit to Minister Klages' home was as reassuring as the talk with him. Father Dietrich with Frau Mall, and the five teutons with most Teutonic names, Ingrun, Hug, Dietrich, Imhild, Kinar and Alltrud, ranged from only six years to eighteen months old, made a picture of family felicity quite impossible to reconcile with the ideas usually associated with the Naz in caricature.

Exchange Waiters With France
Next to Minister Klages the most interesting person in Brunswick was a young French waiter in our hotel. A native of Nice, he was here under a system of international exchange of waiters, on contract to stay here a year to learn German while a German waiter spent a year in Nice to learn French.

The system could be regarded as another step toward that far-off goal of rapprochement between the two countries whose century-old hostility for one another has never died. But the young Frenchman, delighted at the opportunity to speak his mother tongue, spoke out: "In the hotel," he exclaimed, "I am treated well by my colleagues. When I go out of the hotel I am treated like an enemy. I don't understand this people. Their idea of France is a cartoon. And yesterday a Hitler man told me that in three years there would be no more France at all—just a lot of departments—France all cut up into little pieces." He laughed, then grew serious. "I just finished my army service a while ago," he said, "I was hard. But I think I'd rather go back into the army now."

How to Relieve Head Noises

Good Advice For Those Who Fear Deafness

Cataract sufferers who are growing hard of hearing, should take warning from that stuffy feeling of pressure against their ear drums, those buzzing, rumbling head noises, like steam escaping, and take prompt, effective measures to stop this trouble. Head noises due to cataract are almost always the forerunners of deafness and most deaf folks suffer from them constantly. Often the never-ending, nerve-racking "hum" drives the sufferer almost frantic and may result in a nervous breakdown.

Thanks to a remarkable medicine, it is now possible to lessen these head noises and often completely overcome them, and with their disappearance the hearing also greatly improves, and frequently can be restored to normal. From Schlicht Bros. or your druggist secure a 1 oz. bottle of Parmitin (Double Strength), take this home and add to it 1 pint of hot water and a little sugar. Take one tablespoonful four times a day. Parmitin is used this way to reduce by tonic action the inflammation and swelling in the Eustachian Tubes, and thus to equalize the air pressure on the drum, and also to correct any excess secretions in the middle ear. Parmitin usually gives quick, effective results.

Every cataract sufferer should give Parmitin a trial. Adv.

HITS ESTIMATES OF HARBOR COSTS

Schneider Calls Figures Given for Green Bay Project "Excessive"

Washington—(AP)—Representative George J. Schneider, Wisconsin, charged before the House Rivers and Harbors committee Wednesday that army engineers' estimate of the cost for removing shoals in the inner harbor at Green Bay, Wis., was "very, very excessive."

Representative Schneider appeared before the committee in an endeavor to explain the recommendations of the army engineers on the project, which also provides for further widening of the channel in the outer harbor.

The engineers have recommended that private interests remove the shoals, and Brigadier General Pillsbury, assistant chief of the engineering, estimated the cost at $98,000. He said the obstructions are not an actual bar to navigation.

Schneider urged a 25 foot channel, 500 feet wide, to cost $350,000 and require $20,000 annually for maintenance.

Chairman Munstfield of the committee, stated he preferred to follow the engineers' reports rather than to explain their recommendations. He agreed that the committee was empowered to explain their reports, but indicated he felt that "throwing over" the engineers' findings in numerous cases might open up "pork barrel" problems.

That modern method is the basis of Marmola prescription tablets. People have used them for 24 years—millions of boxes of them. Now almost everyone has friends who know and show the delightful effects of Marmola.

If you overweigh, go try Marmola. All druggists supply it, and a book in each box tells you all about it. Start Marmola now and watch results.

START WORK ON PROGRAM FOR ANNUAL FAIR

W. P. Hagman, Committee Chairman, Reports on Progress of Plans

Kaukauna—W. P. Hagman chairman of the executive committee handling arrangements for the annual Mid-winter fair here March 3 and 4 submitted a report of committee activities at a meeting of the Kaukauna Advancement association in Hotel Kaukauna Wednesday evening. The meeting was preceded by a 6:30 dinner.

He stated that all the sub-committees have started work, and literature has been mailed out for school exhibits. That a new theme would be followed in school displays was explained by Mr. Hagman. He pointed out that the new method would increase the interest in this display.

Some new features in evening entertainment may be introduced. Booking of several vaudeville entertainers is under consideration.

Commercial exhibits again may be admitted this year, according to Ed Haas, chairman of the commercial committee. Merchants do not favor the exhibits, Haas pointed out. Use of the new space provided under the south end of the new Lavest-bridge for a display of new cars was suggested by H. F. Weckwerth.

A report of the bridge dedication ceremony was submitted by Herbert Weckwerth, a member of the fair program committee. The committee was complimented for its part in arranging the ceremony.

May Lose Trains

That Kaukauna may lose two more trains on the Ashland division was reported by L. F. Nelson. The trains in question are No. 114, arriving here at 11:10 a. m. going east and No. 153 arriving at 8:10 p. m. and going west. The reason for discontinuing the trains is lack of patronage. Following a discussion, a motion was made to appoint a committee to confer with railroad officials to see what means can be taken to keep these trains running. The committee will be appointed this week.

L. J. Brenzel, a member of the committee delegated to request the city council to underwrite the fair for $1,000 and to seek money to finance the health clinic to be staged in conjunction with the fair, reported that the council made an appropriation of $225 to finance the clinic and also agreed to underwrite the fair for the amount of $1,000. Minutes of the December meeting were read by the secretary and approved.

CHICAGO PLANNING WAR ON RACKETEERS

Two Killings Stir Authorities to New Struggle Against Crime

Chicago—(AP)—A nemesis of their own making may throttle the racketeers who prey on Chicago's industry.

Officialdom, driven into action today by two killings in the cleaning and dyeing business within 10 days and threats of death to others, formulated plans for reprisal.

The chief strategem was the establishment of cut rate non-union cleaning shops to entrap racketeers with deliberate invitations of violence.

And what was described by the state's attorney's office the biggest racket probe ever undertaken in the city took form as agents were being hired for a central racket headquarters directed by Pat Roche, a veteran investigator.

The city, still mindful of the slaying of a legitimate cleaner and foe of the rackets, Benjamin Rosenberg 10 days ago, was startled yesterday by the discovery of the body of Morris Constable, 44, once a retail cleaner.

Rosenberg's widow, who has offered her assistance in bringing his slayers to justice, has received threats on her life and Irving Arbanell, owner of 20 cut-rate shops has been warned he would die today.

PLAN SERIES OF FARM SOILS TEST MEETINGS

BY W. F. WINSEY

Green Bay—Farmers of Brown-co will have an opportunity during the week beginning Feb. 15 to find condition of the soil of their fields at a series of meetings to be held in the county.

These meetings are to be conducted by County Agent J. N. Kavanaugh, who will be assisted by County Agent G. F. Baumelster and C. J. Chapman, soils specialists of the college of agriculture.

As the soils specialists of the college of agriculture and the agricultural extension service of Wisconsin are the hired men of the farmers of the state and have no way of benefiting farmers and earning their salaries except through visiting farms and talking to farmers at meetings, it is up to farmers to attend farm meetings and to hear the reports of the latest discoveries in agriculture and improved farm practices, the county agent pointed out.

SOCIETY WOULD CALL HALT TO FOX HUNTS

Milwaukee—(AP)—No longer will members of fashionable hunt clubs ride to the hounds as they bay in pursuit of the Fox if the Wisconsin Humane society has its way.

The society at a recent meeting voted to appeal to Milwaukee hunt clubs to abandon the sport, contending that hunting animals under conditions unnatural to the animals is cruelty.

If the appeal is disregarded, the society plans to begin a campaign for legislation to prohibit fox hunting, said Walter J. Dethoff, superintendent.

The society will also attempt to stop the practice of shipping young

SEE APPROVAL FOR RELIEF MEASURE

LaFollette and Costigan Are Authors of Bill Seeking $375,000,000

Washington—The combined LaFollette-Costigan $375,000,000 immediate relief bill, in effect a liberalization of the original Costigan measure agreed to by Sen. LaFollette, is expected to be favorably reported to the senate today by the committee on manufactures.

The sub-committee which has been considering first the two individual bills and then the joint measure reported the joint bill Monday and only the lack of quorum on the whole committee prevented its immediate consideration.

The LaFollette-Costigan bill as reported by the sub-committee authorizes $375,000,000 for allocation to the states by a Federal Emergency Relief Board for "the needy, distressed and unemployed." Not more than $125,000,000 is to be spent during the current fiscal year which ends June 30, 1932.

Although the amount of the authorization is identical with that of Costigan's original bill, it is not in reality a departure from LaFollette's plan. The LaFollette bill authorized only $250,000,000 but was based on a 12-month period while Costigan's $375,000,000 was for 18 months.

The joint bill provides for creation of an emergency board to exist for two years, composed of the chief of the children's bureau, the director of extension work of the department of agriculture, and the chief of the vocational rehabilitation service of the federal board for vocational education, and two members to be appointed by the president with the advice and consent of the senate.

Sen. LaFollette's bill provided for a board of three members to be appointed by the President, with the chief of the children's bureau as executive officer.

Sen. Costigan's bill provided for a board of three members, being the three officials designated in the joint bill.

WHO'S NEW IN CONGRESS

Edward H. Crump

Memphis, Tenn.—(AP)—Few if any members of the seventy-second congress are more colorful or more thoroughly seasoned in the hard school of politics than Edward H. Crump, new representative from the tenth Tennessee district.

In 25 years of political warfare Crump, a democrat at heart, became known as "The Red Snapper" because of a shock of red hair and a political skill that made him formidable on the hustings.

His supporters credit Memphis with being one of Dixie's most progressive and best-governed cities and say Crump is responsible. In 1908 he became the first mayor of Memphis under the new commission form of government for which he had fought.

While campaigning for mayor Crump hired W. C. Handy, negro blues writer, and his military band. Handy wrote a campaign song that was moaned from one end of Beale street to the other.

More musicians took it up, the name and words were changed, and it became "The Memphis Blues," one of the forerunners of modern jazz.

PLAN TO COLONIZE BIG TOBACCO FIELDS

Tripoli, North Africa—(AP)—Cultivation of tobacco in the Italian colony of Tripoli has reached such proportions that the government is arranging to bring over 500 families from the mainland to grow it.

Each family will be leased 200 acres, with house and barns. It is estimated that in 10 years 10,000 Italians will have been brought here to raise tobacco. This is half the actual Italian population of Tripoli.

MURDER TRIAL IS CLIMAX TO ACTIVE CAREER

Mrs. Grace Bell Fortescue Has Been Globe Trotter for 40 Years

BY HELEN WARDEN
New York—For the first time in 40 years of particularly happy living all over the world, life has ceased to be a gay adventure to Grace Bell Fortescue.

But while she is held in Honolulu, along with her son-in-law and two sailors in connection with the murder of a Hawaiian, from the four corners of the globe her relatives are rushing to her defense with all the fierce clan spirit of a wandering tribe.

Her brother, Robert Bell, of New York and Washington, has chartered an airplane for the coast to catch the first fast boat for Honolulu, saying "I'm the head of the family now, and Grace needs me."

Her two daughters, Helene and Kenyon Fortescue, are already in Honolulu. Her third daughter, Rion (short for Marion) who is at Oxford working for a degree, has phoned from London that she leaves on the next boat, her step-mother, Mrs. Charles Bell, who is wintering in Rome, has cabled her intention of coming immediately. Her sister Helen, Mrs. Julian Kitcher, of New York, who also was in Europe, is en route home to help. Her husband, Col. Granville Fortescue, who was gassed in the World War, is seriously ill here and unable to go to her aid. Dozens of friends both here and in Washington signified their willingness to stand ready to be of service to Grace Fortescue.

Both Mrs. Fortescue's family and her friends carry the weight of guilt, edged society with them. She herself was born with a golden spoon in her mouth.

Niece of the famous Alexander Graham Bell and granddaughter of Gardner Hubbard, wealthy Bostonian who financed Bell when he first put the telephone on the market, Grace Bell Fortescue's childhood was one of glamour. She and her brother, Bobbie and sister, Helen, spent their winters in the great Bell home in Connecticut avenue, Washington, still one of the show-places of the capital. Summers they were driven with their governesses and pets on the long, adventuresome trek to their grandfather's huge estate, Iruu Oaks.

As a popular young belle, Grace Bell was an outdoor enthusiast, an excellent golfer and even better horsewoman. It was this love of horses that was one of the great attractions between herself and the debonair Granville Fortescue, cousin of Theodore Roosevelt and, one of the famous troops of Rough Riders.

On the day of their engagement, Fortescue won one more silver cup mounted on a blue ribbon that won the high jump in the Washington Horse Show.

From Washington, Granville Fortescue and his bride went to Central America, on official business. Here Mrs. Fortescue added Spanish to her list of languages which already included French, Italian, German. From Central America the Fortescues went to Europe and from then to the present time much of their time has been spent in the Orient, in Europe and other foreign parts of the world.

Just before the war, their last child was born in Ostend, Belgium. Her family of four little girls out of Belgium was a task to test the bravery of any woman, for Fortescue who was a war correspondent, was ordered on. At this time, Robert Bell, her brother, came to her rescue just as she and her brood took the boat from Calais to Dover. He could never speak highly enough of his sister's courage at that time.

From England, Mrs. Fortescue sent two of her girls to her sister, Mrs. Ripley, and leaving the others in excellent care, joined her husband at the front, in Warsaw. Since the war, the family has divided its time between globe trotting, the old family home in Washington and many happy months in Long Island, in the huge mid-Victorian house that belonged to the Roosevelts.

Slim, boyish in figure, with only slight gray in her dark hair, Mrs. Grace Fortescue today is known as a normal, healthy, courageous type of outdoor woman. She plays bridge perfectly, is devoted to both golf and riding, and still has time to do the domestic things a real home-maker does, such as putting up preserves, picking up new bits of old furniture, or changing things about to make home more attractive.

She was at their Long Island home on a Sunday night when news came of the attack on her daughter Thalia. Mrs. Thomas H. Massie. By dawn she was flying to the coast to watch a boat to Honolulu. Her daughter Thalia, who has Mrs. Fortescue's blue eyes but is fair, instead of dark, like her mother, was her first-born. Her romantic marriage with the young naval officer from

New York—(C.P.A.)—Less than four years ago, the aged Hipolito Irigoyen received the largest majority vote ever given a candidate for the presidency of Argentina. He is now being brought from his prison cell on Martin Garcia island to face trial on charges of malfeasance.

Senior Irigoyen qualifies under the Shakespearian adage among those who "had greatness thrust upon them." He was an obscure teacher in a women's normal school, getting on in years and doing a little routine ward politics. His uncle, Dr. Leandro N. Alem, was the founder of the union civilia radical and a leader in the early years of the century. His followers insisted on draping his mantle over the bent and massive shoulders of his eccentric nephew, and in 1916 Irigoyen became president.

He refused to go to the huge pine palace, but ruled and had his living quarters in dingy little rooms over a hat shop in a shabby section of the city. His furniture was Grand Rapids golden oak. He was sometimes called "el peludo," meaning a burrowing animal which crawls in a hole and stays there.

Otherwise, he was "el armadillo," the most secretive of animals. He had one great passion—funerals. A state funeral or just the tinkle of a bell leading a passing cortege would lure him from his cave. He held no cabinet meetings and met his ministers individually. The war was on. Then and in the reconstruction period, the world was sapping Argentina's raw materials. The money rolled in. "El peludo" was a national hero. Then came the crash. A year later his regime was ended by General Uriburu. Irigoyen is now 72—ponderous, soft-visaged and sad-eyed.

Archduke Leopold Salvator, challenged to four duels by Austrian army officers, frequently has had duelling troubles, although they never got to the point of anyone being pinked. The late Tex Rickard once tried to get him to capitalize his belated career. Stranded here in 1927, Leopold tried to borrow money from Count Laszlo Szekenyi, an Austrian minister at Washington. The count made an unfeeling reply and Leopold challenged him to a duel. Rickard sent Leopold the following telegram:

"May I not tender you $5,000 in expenses for your duel with Count Laszlo Szekenyi, and 20 per cent of the gate, provided the affair of honor is held in the Yankee stadium, New York, before Thanksgiving, and also that it be held with eight-ounce boxing gloves?"

The count left for Vienna soon afterward and the duel never came off. The archduke is a nephew of Archduke Ferdinand, whose assassination started the big war. After the war he worked as a garage mechanic for $10 a month, living among mounds of moth-eaten tapestries and mouldy furniture in Castle Hapsburg, heritance of a thousand years of Hapsburgs. He came to America, did a little turn in the movies, got himself in and out of trouble in the sale of the Maria Teresa diamond necklace and returned to Vienna. He is 55.

New York wets have moaned about having harsh prohibition decisions clamped on them by judges from the "sticks." Now they get one of the stiffest decisions of all from a snappy, young, up-and-coming Manhattan judge, whose appointment in 1930 was endorsed by many prominent anti-prohibitionists. Federal Judge Robert P. Patterson sustains the right of prohibition agents to rip out fixtures or wreck furniture in their raids. It is regarded here as an important precedent.

Judge Patterson, now forty years old, was a major in the World War, decorated with the D. S. C., and formerly served on the Mexican border. He was born in Glen Falls, N. Y., was graduated from Harvard Annapolis, Thomas H. Massie, had delighted her mother's heart. Now, from the corners of the earth, others are flying to Mrs. Fortescue's aid as she awaits trial in Honolulu in connection with murder of the man she believed to have wronged her daughter.

STRONG TEAM TO HEAD HOOVER'S FINANCE BODY

Dawes and Meyer Believed Capable of Dealing With Credit Problems

BY DAVID LAWRENCE
Copyright 1932 By Post Pub. Co.

Washington — The selection of General Dawes as administrative head of the reconstruction finance corporation and Eugene Meyer as chairman of the board of directors has a significance which will be more apparent as the operations of the new government agency are unfolded.

Ever since the plan was advanced to have an emergency corporation it has been assumed that Mr. Meyer, because of his experience as head of the war finance corporation, would head up the new institution. While Mr. Meyer's own ability was conceded, there has been some sentiment on Capitol Hill to the effect that the governor of the federal reserve board should not be in charge of the two credit agencies of the government for fear that the public may get the impression that the federal reserve policies are intertwined in reconstruction finance operations.

President Hoover felt that there should be the closest cooperation of course between the federal reserve board and the new corporation but he determined finally that with General Dawes, a commercial banker, and Mr. Meyer, an investment banker, the country would have the assurance of a team that would be able to cope with all problems of credit that might arise.

By making General Dawes the president of the corporation, he becomes responsible for actual administration while Mr. Meyer becomes an adviser along with the secretary of the treasury and the farm loan commissioner. The other three members of the new corporation's directors will be Democrats and it is understood they, together with General Dawes, will constitute the actual working machinery of the corporation. Policies will be formulated at the meetings of the directorate of seven, over which Eugene Meyer will preside. Mr. Meyer will be of inestimable help to General Dawes, for while the latter was in France during the war, Mr. Meyer wrestled with some of the very questions that are bound to come up in the handling of the credits. Mr. Meyer has an uncanny knowledge of market conditions and interest rates and in any financing done by the corporation or any underwriting of bonds he will doubtless play a leading part.

Impressions from New York and elsewhere conveyed here indicate that there is still much unfamiliarity with the way the reconstruction finance corporation will operate. In the first place it has been assumed that two billion dollars worth of securities guaranteed by the treasury would be floated all at once and that this would depress existing government securities.

Gradual Financing
The plan is to finance the $1,500,000,000 of debentures gradually over the next year and it is widely believed that it will not be necessary to float them at all, any more than in the past the existence of such a credit has resulted in its actual use. It is felt that the $500,000,000 of capital, which are of course to be government bonds, will be the equivalent of five billion dollars of credit. Thus the corporation will permit

Honored During Annual Ceremony

Fourteen Valley council boy scouts received recognition as Eagle scouts at the annual court of honor ceremony at Lawrence Memorial chapel last Sunday afternoon. Parents of the youngsters also received special recognition in the form of an Eagle parents pin.

financial institutions that syndicate loans to say publicly that the loans have been examined by the corporation and are eligible for redaction, only loans of real worth will have that privilege but it is tantamount to a guarantee by the treasury of interest and principal on the bonds to be floated by the railroads, utilities or industrial which may make application to their banks or investment institutions in the regular way.

While the reconstruction finance corporation is new in the sense that it is to be applied to new conditions, the principle has been declared sound by the banking world and there is real support for the plan, in contrast with the doubts and skepticism which privately were expressed by bankers when the national credit corporation was launched. It is believed this will be an important factor in contributing to the success of the corporation.

Not Inflation
Already there are evidences that European speculators are trying to distort the corporation's plan into a form of inflation. Actually no new currency will be issued, as would be the case if an inflationary policy were adopted. Instead, bonds and debentures will be sold and paid for by the American people with cash derived from the sale of their own assets or from savings. These debentures will have back of them not only the collateral of the original borrower but the endorsement of a bank or investment house and then the assets of the reconstruction corporation and, finally, the resource-es of the United States treasury itself.

The general feeling here is that the debentures will be sold by a nationwide syndicate through the usual channels of investment and that when the interest rate and term are fixed the investors of the country will oversubscribe them, particularly as they are likely to be short term debentures which will be liquidated as the loans made by the corporation are liquidated in the next two or three years.

CROWLEY DIES TONIGHT FOR SLAYING COP

Cuts Out Paper Toys in Sing Sing Death Cell as He Awaits Doom

Ossining, N. Y. — (C.P.) — Francis Crowley, scrawny youth who lived all his 20 years in New York and can scarcely write his name, cut out the last of his paper toys today and stole glances at a picture of the electric chair pasted on his cell wall. He dies in the chair at Sing Sing tonight for murdering a policeman.

"I didn't want to forget it," said Crowley, explaining with a leer why he pasted up the picture of the chair when they put him in the death house.

Experts tried to find in his past the reasons why the twisted scoundrel, through the series of crimes that brought him the nickname "Two Gun,"

He was the son his attorney said of Dora Ditz, a servant girl, and a private policeman who never married her. Shortly after birth he was taken to the baby farm of Mrs. Anna Crowley, the lawyer said. Growing into adolescence with a mind retarded, he turned from school to two dance places and sludgy sports.

His name was linked with a series of holdups then came an alarm for him in the killing of Virginia Brannen, dime-advice girl who was shot and tossed from an automobile into a junkyard hedge.

One night, bartender Frederick Hirsch of New York, thinking of a stop a betting party, approached a parked automobile. Its occupants were Crowley and his sweetheart, Helen Walsh. Crowley shot him dead and sped away.

Captured After Battle
A few days later detectives cornered him, the girl and Rudolph Duringer, fat truck man, in an apartment house on the upper west side. Bullets and tear gas were poured into the place for two hours before Crowley, wounded and his ammunition exhausted, let the police enter.

Duringer was executed for killing Miss Brannen. Crowley, convicted of the policemen's murder, Joshua Duringer as he went to the chair.

In his cell Crowley began building paper bridges and apartment houses. Defense attorneys said he was a "moral imbecile." The state said he was sane.

After plotting to escape with the aid of a home-made bludgeon and knife fashioned from a spoon handle, Crowley sought to win freedom for Patrick O'Brien, serving 20 to 40 years for a holdup. Crowley said that was one of his own holdups and that O'Brien was innocent. O'Brien won a new trial but was convicted again.

FACE TROUBLE IN OPERATION OF TRUCK LINES

Efforts of Railroads Beset
With Many Difficulties

BY GEORGE E. DOYING
Copyright, 1932, By Cons. Press
Washington—(CFA)—The efforts of some of the leading railroads to coordinate rail and truck lines are being beset with difficulties. As the latest development, the Massachusetts department of public utilities has held that the New York, New Haven & Hartford and the Boston & Maine railroads are evading and violating the state law.

In Kansas six important competing railroads have filed complaints with the public service commission against an existing arrangement between the Union Pacific, the St. Joseph & Grand Island railroad and the Union Pacific Stages, Inc. The complaining carriers are the Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe, the Chicago, Rock Island & Pacific, the Kansas City Southern, the Midland Valley, the Missouri-Kansas-Texas and the St. Louis and San Francisco co.

Ask Same Rates
They ask the state commission to require the three affiliated concerns to apply in connection with the rail-truck service which they established last summer the same rates that are provided for all-rail service.

The Massachusetts action affects two of the largest motor vehicle systems in the east, the New England Transportation Co., subsidiary of the New Haven railroad, and the Boston & Maine Transportation Co., subsidiary of the Boston & Maine railroad. The state department of public utilities has directed the attorney general to bring action in the state supreme court, by mandamus or injunction, to stop the New Haven's freight carrying operations and to take "such action as he deems proper" with respect to the Boston & Maine.

All of the stock of the New England Transportation Co., amounting to $1,500,000, is owned by the New Haven, which also has loaned its subsidiary more than $1,300,000. It is engaged in extensive bus and truck operations, but the passenger lines are not affected by the present proceedings. Proper applications were made for the operation of buses and authority was duly granted, but it appears that neither the railroad nor its subsidiary ever applied for the right to operate freight trucks in Massachusetts.

File Petition
The Motor Truck Club of Massachusetts, Inc., filed a petition asking the public utilities department to require all of these carriers to establish and apply just and compensatory rates. The department held, however, that it could not require the filing of rates when the vehicles are being operated without authority of law.

"We do not believe," the department's order said, "that the obligations imposed upon the railroad (by state law) can be avoided by the railroad establishing a subsidiary which it absolutely dominates and controls."

A slightly different situation was found to exist in the operations of the Boston & Maine and its subsidiary. In this case the handling of freight is conducted by independent operators, who do the actual physical transportation which the Boston & Maine Transportation Co., undertakes to perform. Whether this constitutes operation of motor vehicles, in a legal sense, by the Boston & Maine railroad, which controls its subsidiary as fully as in the New Haven case, was not definitely decided by the department, but the matter was referred to the attorney general for action.

Disguises Of Dry Officers Upheld In Federal Court

Chicago—(AP)—The right of federal agents to use entrapment methods in obtaining liquor evidence has been upheld by Federal Judge Walter C. Lindley.

Attorneys for some of the defendants in the $12,000,000 alleged mid-west alcohol conspiracy trial objected Tuesday to the disguises the agents assumed in dealing with their clients.

Judge Lindley cut them short.

"Of course they used fictitious names and made false statements of their intentions," he said. "Do you expect them to announce they are prohibition agents?"

Agent Bruce F. Armstrong, a veteran of 11 years in the service, testified yesterday to raids he made on two stills, one near Joliet, Ill., and the other near Aurora.

He said the one on the land farm near Joliet yielded a distillery of 48,000 gallon capacity and resulted in the arrest of defendants Paul Cinquina, Vincent Papanti, James Fishburn and Clair Mahoney.

The Aurora still, he said, was directed at the farm of Defendant Joe Keller whom, he testified, he later arrested with Defendants Joe

Expect to Form Milk Producers Group; Gather at Court House

Dairymen who supply milk to Appleton plants will gather at the court house at 1:30 Saturday afternoon, according to letters being sent out by Gustav A. Sell, county agricultural agent.

The dairymen will hear and discuss plans for organization of a Milk Producers association here, a matter considered several weeks ago but at that time abandoned because there was no chance to affiliate with a strong central association.

Plans now are to again try organization, the Appleton association to be affiliated with the Pure Milk Products Cooperative association.
